Law School Visitors' Committee Is Appointed

Appointment of a Committee of Visitors for the Law School has been announced by University President Harlan Hatcher and Dean Allen F. Smith, of the Law School. The group will meet for the first time Nov 9 and 10, at the call of Ralph M. Carson, president of the Lawyers Club.

Establishment of the Visitors' Committee is in accordance with the new bylaws of the Lawyers Club, which provide for such a committee to "meet at the Law School at least once a year to examine the Law School's program of undergraduate, graduate and continuing legal education, and legal research, its contribution to the legal profession and the improvement of law and society, and its relationships to its alumni. It shall make a report of its findings to the President of the University, to the Board of Governors (of the Lawyers Club), and to the faculty of the Law School."

The tentative agenda announced by Mr. Carson for the first meeting includes visits to classes, reports from faculty on various phases of the Law School's program, and a meeting with the Law School administrative officers. From the Dean . . .

A look at the past often helps to illuminate the present. I have recently been looking at some historical facts, to compare today's Michigan Law School with the same school of the past, and I pass the results on to you in the hope that they will be of interest.

DEAN SMITH

Enrollment over the years has had its ups and downs. It was 750 in the year 1911-12, 865 in 1951-52, and 955 in 1961-62. Non-resident enrollment has been fairly constant, ranging from 50 per cent to 60 per cent, and this year it was 56 per cent. We still accept all qualified applicants in the Law School. The professorial staff has grown from 17 in 1911-12 to 37 full-time resident professors in 1961-62. The growth reflects not only a substantial increase in the number of courses in the curriculum, but increased responsibilities which have been assumed by the institution. Research activities and service to the organized bar have been greatly expanded.

The library, one of the truly great collections in the United States, has grown from 31,000 volumes in 1911-12 to more than 305,000 in 1961-62. Periodicals have increased from 24 fifty years ago to the remarkable number of 4,080 serials received today. Annual acquisitions run to almost 8,000 volumes, and the task of organizing the library, finding space for the books, and providing services which will make this resource available to its maximum potential is one which calls for substantial effort. Professor Hobart Coffey, Law Librarian since 1926, has been responsible for this growth.

Despite growth and change, the Law School remains a continuing institution which carries forward the strength of the past. It is noteworthy, for example, that Professor emeritus Ralph W. Aigler was a teacher of every class which held a reunion this spring. He joined the faculty in 1910 and served until 1954. Professor emeritus John Waite served from 1912 to 1951, and Professor emeritus Burke Shartel from 1920 to 1959. The late Edgar Durfee taught from 1911 to 1951, and Grover Grismore from 1914 to 1951. These names, which are familiar to all who have worked in legal education, provide inspiration to the members of the present faculty to continue their efforts in training the best lawyers in the country.

Alumni Gather at State Bar Meetings

Law School alumni have held special meetings in connection with several recent bar association or other gatherings.

On May 23, alumni in the Washington, D.C. area met at the time of the annual meeting of the American Law Institute. Dean Allan F. Smith and Associate Dean Charles W. Joiner spoke briefly. On June 8, a Law School luncheon was held during the Iowa Bar Association meeting, with Dean Joiner as speaker.

Illinois alumni gathered for luncheon in Chicago during their state bar meeting, with Dean Smith as the guest speaker. Texans met during their state convention, July 5, in San Antonio. A guest from the Law School was Prof. J. R. Pearce.

Michigan Law School graduates did well on the California bar examination last fall—all of the 10 graduates who took the examination passed. Michigan and Yale were the only "100 per cent schools" on this examination.

In the New York bar examinations, seven out of eight Michigan graduates passed.

Professors Blume, James Begin Retirement

Two long-time members of the Law School faculty retired from active teaching in June. They are William W. Blume and Laylin K. James.

Professor Blume, a native of West Virginia, was educated in Texas and Tennessee, receiving his B.A. degree from Texas Christian University, studying in the Law Department of Cumberland University, and earning the LL.B. degree from The University of Michigan. In 1928, he received the degree of Doctor of Juridical Science, also from The University of Michigan.

A faculty member of the Comparative Law School of China, in Shanghai, Professor Blume also served as dean of this school from 1921 to 1924. In 1927, he joined the Michigan Law School faculty, and in 1936 was named to a full professorship. He has written extensively, particularly in the field of legal history. One of his most recent articles is "Legislation on the American Frontier," dealing with laws of the Northwest Territory, Michigan Territory, and Indiana Territory, published in the Michigan Law Review this spring.

Professor James is a native of Ohio, and earned both the A.B. and J.D. degrees from The University of Michigan. He taught at the University of Pittsburg Law School prior to joining the Michigan law faculty in 1929. In recent years, he has headed the Law School placement service, assisting graduates in finding positions. He is an authority on corporation law and is the author of Cases and Materials on the Law of Business Associations.

Visiting Faculty Will Include Alwyn Freeman

Four visiting appointments to the Michigan law faculty for the 1962-63 year have been announced by Dean Allen F. Smith.

During the second semester, Alwyn V. Freeman, now the U.S. representative on the International Atomic Energy Agency of the United Nations, will serve as visiting lecturer in law. His appointment has been made possible by the Law School Fund. Mr. Freeman is a native of Detroit and earned the A.B. degree at The University of Michigan. He graduated from the Harvard Law School and is a diplomate of the Universitaire Hautes Etudes Internationales.

Mr. Freeman has served as legal counsel to the Department of State and as a consultant to the U. S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee. He has served on numerous international commissions and conferences, as a member of the United States delegation to the U.N. General Assembly, and as director of research of the Hague Academy of International Law.

Also named to the visiting faculty for the coming year were Kenneth Wang, serving throughout the academic year; and Geoffrey C. Hazard, Jr., and Robert Liberman, both of whom will teach during the spring semester.

Mr. Wang is a native of China and a naturalized citizen of the United States. He has been on the law faculty of St. John's University since 1952. At Michigan, he will assist in teaching a course in comparative law and the seminar on Soviet Civil Law. He will also work in collaboration with Dr. Hsiah of the Library of Congress in preparation of a book on the law of Communist China, which the Law School expects to publish.

Mr. Hazard will come to Michigan from the University of California Law School, at Berkeley, where he has taught for the past four years. Mr. Liberman, who received an LL.M. from Michigan in 1956, is currently on the faculty of the Boston University School of Law.

The 1962 Law Fund annual giving effort will be conducted Sept. 1 to Nov. 15, 1962. Some 250 alumni throughout the United States will conduct the solicitation. Herbert Wilson, of Indianapolis, is chairman of the Fund.

Special Summer School Draws 72 Lawyers

The third Special Summer School for Lawyers, held at the Law School in June, was attended by 72 lawyers. Courses in commercial law (with emphasis on the Uniform Commercial Code), estate planning, wills and trusts, oil and gas, and practice and procedure were offered.

The enrollment of 72 was up from 51 who attended the second summer program, held in 1961. This year's group of "students" included lawyers from 16 states, including Hawaii, and one foreign country—Japan. Their years of graduation from law school ranged from 1919 to 1962, with nearly half the group—32—having graduated since 1950. The second biggest group graduated during the decade of the Forties.

Fifty-four of the enrollees are engaged in general practice, while 17 are corporation lawyers. Forty are Michigan residents. And interestingly, four of the group had attended one of the previous summer programs.

Though most of the lawyers enrolled in only one or two courses, all were invited to attend a series of five general lectures. These consisted of three lectures on the European Common Market, an analysis of the impact of the Congo on the United Nations, and a round-table discussion of the role of the lawyer as a counselor.

Refresher Course Given On Small Business

The legal problems of organizing a small business were examined in refresher courses offered at seven locations in Michigan during June under auspices of the Institute of Continuing Legal Education of the Michigan and Wayne Law Schools and the State Bar.

Entitled "Organizing Small Michigan Business Enterprises," the course was given at St. Clair, Boyne Falls, Windsor, Delta College, Detroit, St. Joseph, and Jackson. Each registrant received the Institute's first Michigan Basic Practice handbook, Organizing Small Michigan Business Enterprises, written by Prof. John S. Abbott of the Detroit College of Law.

Japan Sends Law Books

The Law School has received 100 volumes of law books, in Japanese, as a "thank you" from the Japanese Ministry of Justice.

For the past four years, the Law School has had an arrangement with the office of the Procurator-General of Japan under which one public prosecutor from that office comes each year to study in Ann Arbor. The books are mostly in the area of Japanese criminal law and procedure. They constitute the first gift ever received by the Law School from a foreign government.

Roger Houin, professor of commercial law at the University of Paris, was a visitor in the Law School in April and May. He took part in a special seminar arranged for the legal counsel of Michigan industrial concerns having Common Market operations. Corporation counsel attending were: Robert M. Campbell, Ford Motor Co., Emmett E. Eagan, Tecumseh Products; W. A. Groening, Jr., and Frank Harlow, Dow Chemical; William McNeill, Parke, Davis & Co.; John C. Schluer, General Motors; and J. Paul Smith, Chrysler Corp.

Telstar Poses New Legal Problems

The successful launching of Telstar "makes it imperative that the United States start immediately to seek solutions for the legal and policy problems raised by this new dimension in international telecommunications," Prof. Samuel D. Estep, of the Law School, declared in a radio interview.

Professor Estep discussed Telstar and its legal implications in the radio program "Law and the News," broadcast over the University station WUOM. Host for this series is Law Prof. Joseph R. Julin.

Only two nations, Russia and the U.S., are presently in a position to launch communications satellites, and only two more, Britain and France, appear to have any chance to do so within the next ten years. Consequently, said Professor Estep, the U.S. and Russia are bound together by a common desire "to make use of this communications plan with such magnificent potential without crippling interference by those who are not yet able to duplicate the space feats of the two great powers.

"Actually, this very fact creates the real possibility that Russia and the U.S. will have to reach some mutually satisfactory accommodations on this matter and perhaps can learn to live with each other in the international area," Professor Estep continued.

Basically, he said, there are two main problems. One is the allocation of frequencies for space communications. The second is control of program content. Some nations have resorted to jamming radio broadcasts which for political reasons they did not wish their citizens to hear. Similarly, some nations may begin jamming transmissions of the satellites.

International agreements regulating telephone and telegraph lines and radio broadcasts have been relatively successful, Professor Estep said, but "existing rules clearly are inadequate to the task of regulating a global communication satellite system."

Medical Insurance Rate Increase Criticized

Recent increases in medical malpractice insurance rates in the State of Michigan were seriously questioned by a Law School professor in an address before a joint meeting of the Lenawee County Bar Association and Medical Society.

Prof. Marcus L. Plant branded malpractice insurance rate increases for 1962 "of more than 30 per cent" by the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters as "a vague and ominous indictment of either the courts, the legal profession, the medical profession, or all three" in Michigan. Recent increases, he said, were higher for Michigan than any other section of the country except for a few California counties.

"If I were the leader of the medical profession in Michigan," Professor Plant said, "I would give very serious consideration to asking the Insurance Commissioner to make an investigation of this rate increase."

Professor Plant asserted that there has been a tremendous amount of propaganda in the last decade aimed at convincing the public that the number of malpractice actions and the size of the jury verdicts therein have been going up out of proportion to other types of damage suits.

The situation is worse in some parts of the country than in others, he said, but "there is no apparent reason for thinking that in the State of Michigan there is a crisis or even an unduly serious problem in the field of medical malpractice litigation."

The Cooley Lectures for 1962 will be given on Oct. 23, 24, 25, 29 and 30. The lecturer will be Prof. D. Seaborne Davies, Pro-Vice-Chancellor of the University of Liverpool, England, and Dean of the faculty of law at that institution. The title for his five lectures will be "Problems of Criminal Law in Britain." All lectures will be open to the public.

Law Students Receive Scholarships through Alumni Gifts

Pictured on these pages are some of the Law School students who have received grants and scholarships from Feb. 16, 1961 to the present. A brief sketch of each indicates something about the geographical spread of the Law School enrollment and about the background and scholastic achievement of students receiving scholarships and gifts. A showing of need is required for all scholarships except special prizes awarded for specific achievement. Most of the money used to assist these students was given by alumni scattered throughout the United States.
