Dean Allan F. Smith is Appointed University Vice-President for Academic Affairs

Allan F. Smith, dean of the Law School since 1960, has been named Vice-President for Academic Affairs of the University of Michigan.

Dean Smith will begin his new duties September 1, succeeding Roger W. Heyns, who has accepted the post of chancellor of the University of California at Berkeley.

"Allan Smith has universal admiration, respect, and widely acclaimed competence. He has a remarkable understanding of educational problems as they unfold in the present day. He recognizes that university growth and expansion must be fitted to a constant striving for excellence and wide-open opportunity for those who wish to attend the University of Michigan," said President Harlan Hatcher as he announced the appointment.

DEAN SMITH

The president said the selection of Dean Smith followed wide consultation with the Regents, University deans and directors, representatives of faculty groups, leading faculty members, administrative officers, and others in the University community.

Commenting on his appointment and on his years with the Law School, Dean Smith said, "The position in the Office of Academic Affairs is a tremendously challenging one and I hope that I can be of service to the University in the new post. I shall miss the close association with the fine staff of the Law School, which I have thoroughly enjoyed for 18 years, but I know that we can continue to supply that high quality legal education for which the Law School is so well known."

The new vice-president is widely known as a scholar, administrator, and author, and has gained a reputation as a superior classroom teacher. He first came to the University in 1946 as a lecturer in law and a research associate. He was appointed assistant professor of law in 1947, associate professor in 1950, and professor of law in 1953.

"Dean Smith enjoys a high standing as a member of the University community, and possesses leadership qualities to a superb degree," President Hatcher said. "He has great skill and sensitivity in relationships with faculty and students, and outstanding stature as a legal scholar in the more humanistic and social implications of the law."

During his years with the Law School, Dean Smith has served as director of legal research and chairman of the Graduate Committee. He has also served as chairman of the Senate Advisory Committee on University Affairs.

Before coming to Michigan he had taught at the Stanford University Law School and from 1941 to 1943 he was chief counsel with the Office of Price Administration. During World War II, he served in the Military Intelligence Service of the Army.

Dean Smith is a member of the American Bar Association, the Michigan State Bar Association, Phi Delta Phi (honorary member), and the American Judicature Society. He has served on various committees of the state bar association and as chairman of the Real Property Section. He is now a commissioner-at-large of the Michigan State Bar.

His publications include a volume on "Personal Life Insurance Trusts" and co-editorship of one of the two most widely used casebooks on property. In 1956 he collaborated with Professor Lewis M. Simes in a comprehensive revision of The Law of Future Interests.

Charles W. Joiner, associate dean of the Law School, will serve as acting dean of the School until action is taken to fill Dean Smith's present position.

Bar Foundation Honors Former Dean of Law School

E. Blythe Stason, dean emeritus of the Law School, has received The Fellows Award of the American Bar Foundation "for outstanding research by an individual in law and government."

DEAN STASON

The award was presented at the annual banquet of The Fellows, an organization of more than 850 leading lawyers and judges from every state, in February. The organization supports legal research and education.

The citation praised Dean Stason for his accomplishments as dean of the Law School, his services as administrator of the American Bar Foundation, and for his "contributions as a teacher and author in the fields of administrative agencies, peaceful atomic development, and local government law . . ."

Dean Stason is now a member of the faculty of Vanderbilt University School of Law in Nashville, Tennessee.

Student Civil Rights Council Reports Successful First Year

The Michigan Law Students Civil Rights Research Council has completed a successful first year of operation, according to a report submitted to Dean Smith by Joseph E. McMahon, acting chairman of the group.

The MLSCRRRC was founded by Professor Robert J. Harris and Michael Smith, a 1964 graduate, in the spring of 1964. The council is an independent affiliate of the national Law Student Civil Rights Research Council, which has groups at some 20 law schools.

The council has scheduled conferences and a summer intern program and assists with legal research in civil rights cases. The Michigan group was represented by eight members at a Conference on Law and Indigency in January at Georgetown University and eight Michigan students are part of the internship program. Their assignments are in Mississippi, New York, and Washington, working with various civil rights projects.

During the past year the Michigan group has been asked for assistance on fifteen legal problems. Assignments undertaken included research on problems such as: The Legality of Residential Picketing of Private Homes over Discrimination Matters; Can Ann Arbor Seek Injunctive Relief to Stop Discrimination?; and What Power Does the City Have in Providing Low Cost Housing?

Professor Harris has been faculty adviser of the group. Professor Jerold Israel assisted while Professor Harris was absent on leave for one term.

Distinguished Guests Speak In Law School Forum Series

The Law School Forum, once the Lawyers Club Speakers Committee, presented a series of distinguished guests during the academic year.

The list includes Congressman Neil Staebler; John Kenneth Galbraith; Mr. Justice Theodore Souris of the Michigan Supreme Court; Burke Summers, former Ambassador to Luxembourg; Michigan Lieutenant Governor William Milliken; Nathan Goodnow, president of the Michigan State Bar; and Assistant Attorney General John Doar.

In recent months, speakers have included President Harlan Hatcher; John Feikens, co-chairman of the Michigan Civil Rights Commission; Stephen Schlossberg, counsel for the UAW-CIO; and Jerome Cavanagh, mayor of Detroit.

President Hatcher discussed the future of the University with the students. He noted the growth and accomplishments of the University since the war and outlined what can be expected in coming years.

Mr. Feikens, a long-time Detroit attorney and former State Republican Chairman, spoke on current civil rights problems, both locally and nationally, devoting himself primarily to equal housing rights.

Mr. Schlossberg spoke to Lawyers Club members on current developments in labor law, citing two recent cases as a basis for discussion.

Mayor Cavanagh spoke on current problems in urban areas. He stressed particularly the growth of the federal-city relationship that is continuing to emerge in this country. He expressed his support for the strengthening of this relationship, rather than of the federal-state programs in which the city functions merely as a sub-division of the state.

Statistical Study Profiles Michigan Law Graduates

The typical alumnus of the Law School is an elusive person to locate—if indeed he exists—but new figures from the American Bar Foundation allow a profile of the Michigan alumnus as he compares to graduates of other major law schools.

The Michigan lawyer, first of all, is a member of the second largest alumni body in the country. The 7,391 alumni, listed in the Bar Foundation's The American Lawyer: 1964 Statistical Report, are exceeded only by the 14,577 graduates of Harvard.

Chances are, the Michigan alumnus is in private practice—71.5 per cent of the group are (5,425). One third of his classmates (33.1 per cent) are in partnership. An additional 27.7 per cent are in a solo practice.

There is an even smaller chance that the typical alumnus is in a salaried position with a private concern other than a law firm although 13.4 per cent of the group, some 985 members of the alumni body, hold such positions. Although the percentage of the graduates is small, it represents the second largest number of men in the country, again topped only by Harvard's 1,893 holding such salaried positions.

Law School Awards Presented at Banquet

Awards were presented to 128 Law School students at the annual Honors Day banquet in March.

Four Law School seniors received Henry M. Bates Memorial Scholarships, awarded annually for scholarship in both undergraduate and legal studies, personality, character, extracurricular interests, and promise of a distinguished career.

They are C. Douglas Kranwinkle of Elgin, Illinois; David M. Ebel of Topeka, Kansas; Albert E. Fowerbaugh of Lakewood, Ohio; and John H. Blish of Racine, Wisconsin.

Others honored included members of Coif, editors of the Michigan Law Review, various scholarship winners, and recipients of book awards presented by legal publishing companies for students writing the best examination papers in a course and for making the most significant contribution toward over-all legal scholarship.

The speaker for the banquet was David R. Macdonald, a 1955 graduate of the Law School and a lawyer with the Chicago firm of Baker, McKenzie, and Hightower.

American Liberalism is Topic Of Annual Cook Lecture Series

"The Ascendancy of American Liberalism" will be the theme of the 1965 William W. Cook Lectures.

Leslie W. Dunbar, executive director of the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta, will deliver the lectures October 19, 21, 26, 28, and November 2.

In the course of the five lectures, he will examine the campaign to build civil rights into the structure of American society, the growing move for reapportionment, the method of reform through judicial process, the war on poverty, and the liberal temper of the times.

Dean Allan F. Smith is chairman of the Cook Lecture Committee. They are sponsored by the William W. Cook Foundation established by the late Mr. Cook, who also presented the Law Quadrangle to the University.

Four New Members Join Michigan Law Faculty

Four new members will join the Law School Faculty for the fall term.

They are Paul D. Carrington, Yale Kamisar, Arthur R. Miller, and Theodore J. St. Antoine.

Professor Carrington, who has been visiting professor of law at the Law School during the winter term, has been professor of law at Ohio State University. He holds the LL.B. degree from Harvard Law School, where he was a teaching fellow for the year 1957-58. He became associate professor of Law at the University of Wyoming in 1958 and moved to Indiana University School of Law in 1960. Professor Carrington has been at Ohio State since 1962. At Michigan he will devote much of his time to work in the field of civil procedure, but will also teach in the field of commercial law and in the field of urban development.

Professor Kamisar is a graduate of New York University and Columbia University Law School. He practiced with Covington and Burling of Washington, D.C. from 1955 to 1957, before moving to the University of Minnesota Law School in 1957. He taught at Michigan in the summer of 1964 and was a visiting professor at Harvard Law School during 1964-65. Professor Kamisar is the co-author of a new casebook on constitutional law and is presently working on a new set of materials for criminal law. He will teach in the fields of criminal law, evidence, and constitutional law.

Arthur Miller became associate professor of law at the beginning of the University's summer half term. He received his A.B. degree with high honors from the University of Rochester and the LL.B. magna cum laude from Harvard Law School. After three years of private practice with Cleary, Gottlieb, Steen and Hamilton in New York, Professor Miller served as associate director of a project on international procedure at Columbia University Law School. He joined the University of Minnesota law faculty in 1962. In the past three years he has served as co-author of a nine volume treatise on New York civil practice. He will teach primarily in the field of civil procedure but will also work in the field of copyright and unfair trade practices.

Theodore St. Antoine will become associate professor of law beginning with the fall term. A graduate, summa cum laude, from Fordham College, he received the J.D. degree from The University of Michigan Law School in 1954. He took post-graduate work in law and economics under a Fulbright grant at the University of London in 1957-58, following army service with the Judge Advocate General's Office. For five months in 1958 he served as a member of the Board of Monitors to oversee the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. He joined the law office of J. Albert Woll in Washington in 1958 and became a partner in the firm of Woll, Mayer and St. Antoine in 1963. He will teach the basic course in Labor Law, a seminar in the same field, and one additional freshman course.

Oppenheim and Coffey Retire from Law Faculty

Professors S. Chesterfield Oppenheim and Hobart Coffey are retiring from the Law School faculty.

Both men have had long service with the University and are recognized as leading authorities in their fields—Professor Oppenheim in anti-trust law and unfair trade regulation and Professor Coffey as director of the Law Library.

Professor Oppenheim, who begins retirement furlough with the fall term, holds an A.M. degree from Columbia University. He was instructor in economics at the University from 1921 to 1926. He received the J.D. degree from the Law School in 1926 and was teaching and research assistant to the dean of the Law School and an instructor in equity during 1926–27.

He was then named assistant professor of law at George Washington University and was promoted to full professor there before returning to the U-M as professor of law in 1952. He returned to George Washington as acting dean and executive officer of the Law School during 1948–50.

Professor Oppenheim is the author of Federal Anti-trust Law: Cases and Comments and is editor-in-chief of the trade regulation law series published by Little, Brown, and Co.

Professor Coffey, who has been with the University since 1921 when he joined the faculty of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts as an instructor in rhetoric, became law librarian in 1925 and director of the Law Library in 1945.

He holds Bachelor of Law and Juris Doctor degrees from the Law School and has studied at the University of Paris Law School, University of Berlin Law School, and University of Munich Law School.

It has been under Professor Coffey's direction that the Law Library has become one of the great law libraries of the world. Starting with approximately 55,000 volumes in 1926 when Professor Coffey took active charge, the collection has increased to over 330,000 volumes representing all the countries in the world.

Profile—

A similar occurrence is found in the number of Michigan graduates in judicial positions. The percentage in general judicial positions is only 3.3, but the total number, 244, is the second highest in the nation.

Of this group in judicial positions, 29 are in the federal judiciary. This also is the second largest group in the country. In both cases, the leader by weight of numbers is Harvard.

Both in total number of alumni, and percentage of the alumni body, Michigan has relatively few graduates in governmental positions, other than judicial. The Law School ranks fifth behind George Washington, Georgetown, Harvard, and Texas with 573 alumni in government. This includes 270 alumni holding positions in the federal government.

In its contributions to the teaching ranks, Michigan ranks high, surpassed by only two other schools in number of alumni in positions with educational institutions. There are 108 Michigan alumni in this category—Yale University has 111 and Harvard 256.

Paul Kauper is Named To Butzel Professorship

Professor Paul Kauper has been named to the Henry M. Butzel professorship in law.

The appointment is the first to the chair endowed by the late Mr. Butzel, a graduate of the Law School and former Justice of the Supreme Court of Michigan.

The professorship represents a five-year appointment by the Regents of the University, on the recommendation of the Dean of the Law School. The holder may succeed to additional appointments to the chair.

Professor Kauper is a graduate of the Law School with the degree Juris Doctor. He first came to the University in 1932 as a research assistant. From 1934 to 1936 he was a junior associate of White and Case in New York. He returned to the University as assistant professor in 1939. He was in the legal department of Pan American Petroleum and Transport Company in New York from 1942 to 1945 when he returned to the University as a full professor.

His major field of teaching and research is constitutional law and he is the author of several books on constitutional law, including the recently published Religion and the Constitution.

In addition to the appointment to the Butzel professorship, Professor Kauper has also been elected president of the Order of the Coif, as reported in the last Law Quadrangle Notes.

Law Placement Office Reports Successful Year

The Law School Placement Office reports a successful year 1964–65 with increasing numbers of seniors placed with an increasing number of firms interviewing.

The report for the year shows 173 seniors placed as of July 14, 1965, from a class of 308 seniors. An additional 70 juniors were placed in summer jobs.

During the year 171 interviewers visited the school and the Placement Office arranged a total of 245 interviewing schedules. Each schedule represents about 10 interviews, so there were approximately 2,450 individual interviews arranged for graduating seniors and juniors seeking summer work.

In addition to the increase in number of placements and number of interviews (151 senior placements were made with 2,270 individual interviews last year) the salary range was good this year. Eighty-two seniors reported salaries ranging from $4,800 to $9,400, with the average at $7,326 and the median at $7,700 per year.

1965 Graduates Total 253; 58 Receive Juris Doctor

The Law School graduated 253 students in the class of 1965. The various legal degrees were awarded at the University Commencement Exercises on May 1, but the final list of graduates was not compiled until after the end of classes in late May. The breakdown of degrees is: LL.B., 182; J.D., 58; M.C.L., 7; and LL.M., 6.

Lawyers' Club is Scheduled for Renovation Will be First Major Effort Since Construction

The Lawyers' Club is scheduled for its first major renovation since the building was completed in 1924.

The Board of Governors of the Club has appropriated over $900,000 for the modernization and repair of the building, including structural repair of the facilities where necessary and improvements in the furnishings.

Among the areas designated for attention are remodeling of rooms and baths in the club, modifications in the heating and ventilating systems, replacement of window screens, repair of damaged linoleum and plaster, replacement and refurbishing of room and lounge furniture, and installation of new drapes and rugs.

Recreation facilities in the basement of the Lawyers' Club will be remodeled for greater comfort and convenience. Several structural changes in this part of the Club will result in better arrangement of the present mail room to cut down inconvenience and confusion, a new television area in the space now occupied by laundry facilities, and rerouting of traffic flow to the mailing, storage, and bathroom areas in the Club basement.

The Lawyers' Club was the first of the buildings in today's Law Quadrangle to be completed. It is the gift of W. W. Cook, an 1882 alumnus of the Law School, as are the other three buildings in the complex—the John P. Cook Dormitory, the Legal Research Building, and Hutchins Hall.

The four structures were built within the decade from 1923 to 1933, with Hutchins Hall being the last to be completed. The story of the beginnings of the Law Quadrangle are outlined in The University of Michigan, An Encyclopedic Survey.

Mr. Cook had first planned to endow a professorship of the law of corporations, but eventually this plan was merged in the more comprehensive and generous gift of the Law School buildings.

When President Hutchins suggested to Mr. Cook that the Law School needed a new building and more adequate equipment, Mr. Cook was immediately interested. In 1920 a plan was prepared by members of the Law School staff and submitted to Mr. Cook for the erection of a Law School building to include a library and dormitory. It also provided for a proposed endowment, the income to be used for the development of legal research and graduate work.

A series of discussions between Mr. Cook, President Hutchins, Dean Henry Bates, and the architects, York and Sawyer of New York, resulted in the four-building quadrangle plan.

The translation of the plan into buildings began shortly after that time and the result was the Lawyers' Club with its vaulted lounge, oak paneling, carved beams, and inlaid marble.

The present renovations will not alter the design or appointments of the building, many of which could not be replaced or duplicated today, but are planned to give the Club needed improvements for additional years of service to the Law School.

Scheduled for renovation in the basement of the Lawyer's Club are the sections of the laundry room and adjoining corridor shown below. This area is slated to become a television lounge when the project is complete. The remodeling is the first major overhaul of the Law Quadrangle, which was built between 1923 and 1933.

Law School Grading System Is Revised by the Faculty

The Law School grading system has been revised by the faculty, acting on the report of a faculty committee.

Beginning in May, the grades A+, B+, and D+ were added to the existing grades. The committee had found that the original six grading categories did not provide an adequate structure for proper discrimination among various levels of performance.

The additional grade categories were selected as the best method to improve the grading structure, short of adopting a numerical grading system.

"Any grading system tends to create an appearance of precision in the grading process which is somewhat misleading. Nevertheless, when a single grade category covers too large a group, both instructor and student are distressed by the necessity of lumping together widely disparate performances. The new system will obviate that distress and be of great assistance in the evaluation process," said Dean Allan F. Smith.

The sixth in the Law Quadrangle picture series is a section of the Lawyer's Club—one familiar to all former residents of the Club and law students because it houses the dining room. Black and white prints, suitable for framing, of this picture are available for $1.50 from Information Services, 3528 Administration Building, The University of Michigan, Ann Arbor 48104. Please make checks payable to The University of Michigan and specify picture 6.

Law School Fund Plans Near Completion for 1965

The final organization of the 1965 Law School Fund is now complete and the campaign is ready for a September 1 beginning.

EMMETT EAGAN

Added to the personnel for the campaign since the last Law Quad Notes have been the chairmen for the thirteen regions covered by the fund campaign. They are: George Diethelm, Ben Quigg, John Morrow, John Elam, Jim Nicholson, Robert Stuart, Carl Enggas, Bob May, Phil Westbrook, Willis Bullard, Harry Gault, Robert Heaney, and Arthur Fong.

The 1964 Law School Fund, of which the final report has been mailed to alumni, raised a total of $144,898 from 2,913 gifts by alumni and friends of the Law School.

National chairman of the 1965 Law School Fund is Emmett E. Eagan, a 1934 alumnus of the Law School. He is associated with the firm of Miller, Canfield, Paddock, and Stone of Detroit. Mr. Eagan has been Wayne County co-chairman for two years.

Four Visiting Professors Will Teach During 1965-66

Four visiting professors will be teaching at the Law School during the 1965-66 school year.

They are Professors Wayne R. LaFave, Robert M. Leavell, Richard M. Buxbaum, and Marlyn E. Luger.

Professor Buxbaum, from the University of California at Berkeley, will teach antitrust courses during the fall term. Professor LaFave will teach criminal law and criminal justice administration during the winter term. He is on the faculty of the University of Illinois Law School.

Professors Leavell and Luger will be at the School for the full academic year. Professor Leavell will be teaching business associations and corporations. He is on the faculty of the University of Georgia. Professor Luger, a member of the West Virginia University law faculty, will teach pleading and joinder and selective problems in civil procedure.

While these men are at the Law School, five members of the faculty will be on leave. Absent during the fall term will be Professors Samuel Estep and William Pierce. Professor Estep will spend a portion of his leave in Geneva at an international conference convened to work out adjustments to radio frequency usage necessitated by the use of communication satellites.

Professors Jerold Israel, Paul Kauper, and Alan Polasky will be on leave during the winter term. Professor Israel will be a visiting professor at Stanford University and Professor Polasky will be teaching in Uruguay.
