KELLOGG FIGHT RECALLED

Report on Smoking Was Years Late

BY BETTY FORD
Press Press Correspondent

BATTLE CREEK — The Government report on the health hazards of smoking came 70 or more years too late to help Dr. John Harvey Kellogg in his lifelong war on tobacco.

But it served to recall the era when Dr. Kellogg, as medical director of the famed Battle Creek Sanitarium, helped to make this city a center of an antismoking campaign in which thousands were convinced that they should abandon the habit.
AN AGGRESSIVE campaign against the “evil” of smoking was started here by the Seventh Day Adventist Church in 1861. Dr. Kellogg took up the fight when he became medical director of the sanitarium in 1876. "Undisputed facts show that tobacco is a heart poison, a muscle poison and a nerve poison," Dr. Kellogg declared more than 70 years ago. "It prevents the proper development of growing youth. Tobacco causes constriction of the blood vessels and extensive loss of the arteries."

Dr. Kellogg—physician, surgeon, author, lecturer, world traveler, musician and philosopher—and his brother, the widely known W. K. Kellogg, both lived to be 91. Dr. Kellogg died Dec. 14, 1943.

But during his lifetime, the crusade to convince others of the benefits of his principles for healthful living (he was also a vegetarian and was opposed to alcohol and coffee) met heavy setbacks.

 WORLD WAR I **

During World War I the “Smokes for Yanks” campaign aimed at providing cigarettes to the doughboys in Europe. And then cigarettes started to become popular—and accepted—among women.

This trend intensified, although as late as 1922 a New York policeman, Peter Killyon, felt justified in knocking a cigarette from the hand of Mrs. May Sladden, 19, rapping her knuckles with his nightstick and announcing:

"There’ll be no cigarette smoking by any woman on my beat."

Under Dr. James R. Jeffrey, medical director at what now is the Battle Creek Health Center, the institution remains dedicated to the principles of "biologic living" developed by Dr. Kellogg, updated by advanced medical knowledge.

DR. JEFFREY doubted that, despite this history, a report on smoking would have any more immediate effect in Battle Creek than elsewhere.

"Human nature is about the same everywhere," he said. "The one important thing is that the facts have been made known by the Surgeon General’s Advisory Committee."

"An important start will be made in the right direction if coughing is made effective for teen-agers. Whatever adults may do will be a measure of their own concern."
Dr. Kellogg's Life Highlighted

Medical Successor Reminisces for Historical Group

Sidelights and anecdotes concerning the late Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, long head of the Battle Creek Health Center, were related last night by Dr. James R. Jeffrey, medical director of the institution since Dr. Kellogg's death, Dec. 14, 1943.

Dr. Jeffrey, whose association with Dr. Kellogg began in 1911, when he took a janitor's job at "the San" to earn money for his medical education, spoke at a meeting of the Battle Creek Historical Society at Kingman Museum.

Skilled As Surgeon

Tracing Dr. Kellogg's career from childhood, when at the age of 10 he worked here 10 hours a day in his father's broom factory, Dr. Jeffrey revealed numerous details not generally known. He also touched on Dr. Kellogg's great skill as a surgeon, noting that he did more than 22,000 abdominal operations during his career.

Dr. Jeffrey's first professional contact with Dr. Kellogg was as a student nurse in the operating room. Years later, he assisted Dr. Kellogg, then 84, in the last operation he performed.

Printer and Author

Among Dr. Jeffrey's many reminiscences of Dr. Kellogg were these:

The doctor learned the printing trade at the age of 12, was a proof-reader at 14, and when the printers complained of the number of corrections he marked, was made manuscript editor at 15.

He was the author of 50 books, which sold more than a million copies, and hundreds of magazine articles. His books "Light Therapy" and "New Diabetics" were the first scientific works ever published in America in their respective fields.

Cornflakes Invented

Mr. Hoover said, "Dr. Kellogg lived a long and exceedingly useful life. Many thousands owe their health and happiness to him. He was a great American and hosts will mourn his passing."

He often worked 10 to 12 hours a day in surgery and when everyone else was worn out, would ask, "Aren't there any more?" He invented a number of surgical instruments and operative techniques.

It was general knowledge that President Coolidge took daily rides on a mechanical "horse" in the White House, but few knew that the machine was an invention of Dr. Kellogg's.

When the Dionne quintuplets, as babies, were seriously ill with a bowel ailment, Dr. Kellogg wired their physician, Dr. Dafoe, that he was sending a soy bean product of his invention as a cure. Ten days later, Dr. Dafoe reported the babies were well on the road to recovery.

Florida Sanitarium

When Glen Curtis, of aviation fame, learned that Dr. Kellogg planned to establish a sanitarium in Florida, he offered him a hotel worth well over a quarter-million dollars for one dollar, "That's too cheap," said Dr. Kellogg, and insisted on paying $10.

Recalling the testimonial dinner given for Dr. Kellogg on his 90th birthday in 1942, Dr. Jeffrey told of the hundreds of congratulatory messages from prominent Americans.

Among them was one from former President Herbert Hoover. After Dr. Kellogg's death
Who Are Michigan's Best Citizens?

His devotion to high standards in the world of sport has not been unchallenged, but the hammers of the knucklers have been broken on the anvil of his sterling character. A year ago Saturday, Saturday Night scored him for his strict puritanism. What finer compliment could he desire? Every Sunday finds him in his place at church and he has done more than any one man in Michigan to build clean sport.

Henry Ford

Henry Ford comes next. No, Henry Ford? The one who feels that he is a steward of God and must administer his wealth as in the sight of God. That is the Ford that Michigan loves.

There is another Henry Ford, dreamer of vast industrial realms to conquer, pitting his mind against the field in the game of competitive industry, a wizard playing with the lightning and harnessing the whirlwind to draw his chariots. Time will tell, and possibly in the near future, whether that Henry Ford will be written in with the names of those who blessed the world, or whether this vast empire of steel will prove a Frankenstein.

That is not the Henry Ford that the state loves, the common everyday Mr. Ford with a kindly heart, the man who is big enough to provision and guard a chain of cities, loose the homeless, give good counsels and a chance of life to whole communities.

In other words, it is Mr. Ford when he is nearest like his wife. Mr. Ford is always the same, thinking of others, doing for others, living for others. Almost thou persuadest us to put her in this form of honor, but Mr. Ford retains his place of his own accord. Did he not show his good sense when he chose her for a wife?

The Kelloggs

Next comes the Kelloggs of Battle Creek. Dr. J. H. Kellogg has for half a century made his great sanitarium a house of healing to thousands. If most of the patients "paid as they went," they have been literally "treated" to health. An army of missionaries, across the years, have been cared for at less than cost. If Dr. Kellogg's philanthropies have brought him little gain, yet he has given him with greater wisdom than many, and credit him as the giver of health to hosts of people.

His brother, W. K. Kellogg, of corn flake fame, has in recent years awakened the joy of giving, of putting his money where it would live after he died. He is having the time of his life through the Kellogg Foundation, trying to be of help to the rural communities of Michigan as well as a godfather to his own city of Battle Creek.

We would include in our list of the ten most desirable citizens the name of Dr. Clark D. Brooks, Detroit surgeon. Just eleven years ago he cut into our editorial anatomy and brought forth five precious gall stones that we had clung to for years. With a smile he said, "Well, I've added fifteen years to your life."

A case much like that got prominent mention in the Old Testament. Which year is it? Is any wonder that the gift of life prompts us to lay our little tribute at his door? Other surgeons may be as great, but Brooks is only one, and it is to hosts of others.

But what about the other great Michigan physicians and surgeons—such with Drs. Collier and Past of Ann Arbor?

Who Is Who?

We turn the next ones over to our readers to decide. If wise giving is to be considered, how about James Couzens? His works will certainly keep his name among us. And the Fisher Brothers? They are good men, and wise to give when the depression hit as they. You'd lose at it again.

Walter C. Booth, whose monument at Cranbrook, the school and the church, is the joy of motorists, and that he was a "wondrous" man is immortalized in Scripture. What would they have said of Charles E. H. Bodger of Grand Rapids? His name is written deep as well as high by his benefactions.

Then there are the veterans of Michigan, such as Chase S. Osborn, typical of the rough and rugged character of the great Upper Peninsula.

There is J. Robert Crouse, of Cleveland, born in Hartland, Michigan, and donor of Waldenwoods. He is planning to extend his dream for his native town until $12,000,000 in plant and endowment will be invested there. If he would come back to Michigan would he not be included?

Business Men

Once, we could have named great bankers, but who would undertake to do it now? Yet there is a flavor coming to the front men who shall lead us out of the fog and win their laurels for their work in a crisis. Who are they?

Edna Ferber was born in Kalamazoo, but lived her life and made her mark elsewhere. Does our past seem more glorious than the present just in the review of their lives for the time of their laurels? The office does not make the citizen, although it does often give him a great chance to do his stuff.

Please do not charge us with being made on a personal bias. If dropped into court, we might have to plead guilty. Make your own list, if you can.

Senator A. H. Vanderbilt and Senator James Couzens are candidates for honors, depending on their work in this very critical state.

We know so many good editors out through the state that we are stumped, but a wise friend nominates Stuart H. Perry of the Adrian Telegram. Should we pass by James Schermershorn and W. J. Cameron? They survived their loss of editorship.

Teachers

If we think, not of money, but of the years of service in Michigan at its strategic centers, what about such men as Dr. F. B. Goodrich and Dr. Ernest Burnham? The former has forty years of unusual service to Michigan, from Winona Lake to Washington. The latter has given his life to the training of rural teachers, and do they not train the men who rule the world? Certainly, teachers give more than money, and Michigan owes it to itself to honor its teachers throughout the state who have contributed far more than money across long years.

More and more are we inclined to place our true and tried teachers ahead of our millionaires. Who can put a value on the work of such men as Dr. Elmer S. Dunn, Dr. R. Clyde Ford, of Ypsilanti, and Dr. Webster H. Pearson, now Superintendent of Public Instruction? What about men like Professors Hobbs, Henderson and Wolf of Ann Arbor?

Should we not include Dr. T. Paul Hickey, of the Detroit Institute of Technology, who has won and maintained a high place among the state educators? What about such lifelong educators as the presidents of our state schools: E. C. Warriner, Calvin University, and H. D. White? J. H. Shaw, John M. Munson, Alexander G. Ruthven, William O. Hotchkiss? Not to speak of the thousands of our high schools, where there are men who have to ever enlarge statesmanship to do a big business on a small cost. These are the creative spirits of Michigan.

A Catholic Bishop

Where does Bishop Michael James Gallagher come in? Since his appointment in 1918, the Roman Catholic Diocese of Detroit has been put across a most a prodigious extension in new churches, schools, cemeteries, and the new University of Detroit. It overtops even the extension of the great auto plants.

By the Catholic system, the Bishop has placed himself in the hands of his church, and presumably this great program starts from Bishop Gallagher's courage and vision. It was "never would get in as deep again." That was at the beginning of the depression when you feel quality was the doubt threatening this great movement today. Did the Bishop find him through as well as he piloted them into the enterprise, he will deserve a high place in Michigan.

We started this article with a dream of what a task this was. We gladly turn it over to our readers to finish. It is always queer when something that is to finish H. Suppose you trim down this list to ten!
BIRTHDAY MEMENTOES—Elder Oliver Jacques and Miss Leta Browning of the Battle Creek Health Center staff arrange one of the exhibits for open house observance of Dr. John Harvey Kellogg’s 110th birthday anniversary today.

Salute to Dr. Kellogg
Open House Today Honors Birthday of Health Pioneer

The 110th anniversary of the birth of Dr. John Harvey Kellogg will be commemorated with an open house from 2:30 to 9 p.m. today at the Battle Creek Health Center, to which the public is invited.

The program will include a series of six illustrated lectures on three subjects by Elder Oliver L. Jacques, reviewing the many accomplishments of the medical man and organizing genius who made the old Sanitarium an institution known around the world and the person most responsible for establishing Battle Creek’s fame as the Health City.

CONDUCTED TOURS at the Health Center today will demonstrate that health principles originated by Dr. Kellogg are still being followed. Persons making this tour will see at first-hand what the Health Center offers not only to the Battle Creek community but to health seekers from all parts of the nation.

A “slimmensbord” will be served from 5:45 to 7 p.m., for which reservations may be made by telephoning the Battle Creek Health Center. In addition, refreshments will be served to the public in the newly rebuilt and equipped mechanical gymnasium.

The actual anniversary of Dr. Kellogg’s birth will be Monday, Feb. 26. The doctor’s birthplace was Tyrone, Mich., where his parents, John Preston and Ann J. (Stanley) Kellogg, had located after moving from the east. Dr. Kellogg was brought here as a child and had his early schooling in Battle Creek. He attended the University of Michigan but was graduated in medicine in 1875 in New York City.

HE WAS INVITED to take over operation of the Health Reform Institute for which he originated the name “Sanitarium” in 1877. Dr. Kellogg remained with this famed institution until his death here at 91 on Dec. 14, 1943.

Following is the schedule of lecture programs arranged by Elder Jacques:

“Dr. Kellogg and America’s Health,” 3:30, 5:30 and 8 p.m.
“Meeting Mental Health Needs the American Way,” 4:30 and 7 p.m.
“A Picture Tour of the Mental Health Unit,” 9 p.m.

Those joining the conducted tours of the Health Center will meet in the lobby during the afternoon and evening. Included in the tour will be public rooms on the first floor of the main building, the physical medicine facilities on the second floor, two or three of the guest rooms and the new mechanical gymnasium.

HAS BIRTHDAY TODAY

Friends of San Chief Do More Celebrating on 75th Birthday Than He Does.

This is just another Saturday for Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, who is leaving it to his friends to do more celebrating than he is permitting himself to indulge in, on his 75th birthday.

There were no parties and no speeches scheduled in recognition of the event at the Sanitarium today, Dr. Kellogg spending the day quietly at home—at work. He was interrupted many times, however, by congratulatory telephone messages, telegrams and letters from local residents and from many other states.

Charles H. Wheelock, secretary of the famous Three-Quarter Century club, today officially admitted Dr. Kellogg to full membership in that organization, of which he has been president for the past two years.

Among the many felicitations received by the superintendent of the Sanitarium today, was a letter from the faculty of Battle Creek College, of which he is president of the board of directors. He established this college in 1922. Following is the text of this letter, to which are affixed the signatures of every professor and instructor in the school—a list of considerable magnitude:

"Dear Dr. Kellogg:

"On this your 75th birthday we, the members of the Battle Creek College faculty, desire to express to you our unswerving loyalty, our deep appreciation of your untiring efforts, and our best wishes for your health, happiness, and prosperity during the coming year.

"The longer we remain in our association with you, the more deeply we are convinced of the sincerity of your purpose, of the wisdom of your counsel, and of the selfless devotion which you have to your high ideals. With all the weight of your years you are still able to put most of us to shame even in the quantity of work which you are able to deliver from day to day. We marvel at your resourcefulness, your untiring energy, and your steadfastness and perseverance."

We hope you may become increasingly conscious of the support of our faculty, of our real affection for you personally, and of our devotion to the principles for which you stand. May the coming year be the greatest year of your history, is the wish of your friends."

The present organization of Battle Creek College, whereby the five schools are consolidated under one administration, was effected by Dr. Kellogg, although the schools of nursing, physical education, and home economics had been in existence previously and were already acknowledged pre-eminent.

Dr. Kellogg, 75 Yesterday, Recalls How, in Youth, He Hated Surgery

"If I had known you were going to live this long, John, and would amount to something, I should have given you a better education, said my father to me on what proved to be his death bed," said Dr. John Harvey Kellogg in reviewing briefly the outline of his life, before a group of Battle Creek college faculty and house directors, Friday at the regular monthly faculty luncheon at East Hall. "As a boy I was in such poor health they were undecided as to whether I was worth raising," he said, "and so I have always been in a hurry to accomplish as much as I possibly could while I did live. And while I am still doing a full day's work on the average, I am slowing up a little since I must admit being 75 years old tomorrow. I surely never expected to live so long when I was a boy, but now I am looking forward to being at least 100 before I give up.

"I had no intention of being a physician when I was going to school and college," Dr. Kellogg said. "I studied subjects related to medicine and surgery to help me in my general education. The thought of surgical work was repulsive to me, and the unpleasant things in a physician's life were most undesirable to me. But circumstances seemingly forced me into these channels." He then related in detail how the early "water-cure" institution of Battle Creek struggled into existence, only to be on the verge of failure, when he was asked to take up the management of it 50 years ago. At that time Dr. Kellogg was but 21 years of age. Only a small group of persons were patrons, and when they learned that a mere youth was appointed to take charge, the group overnight became still smaller. "But," said Dr. Kellogg, "each year the patronage of the institution has grown. We had reverses at the time of the burning of the former Sanitarium building 25 years ago, but prosperity followed, until we are obliged again to enlarge its building. Not only to heal the sick but to educate for right living is our great object. With this thought in mind, Battle Creek college was founded, to educate in different channels than any other institution."

The luncheon was one of the most delightful occasions of the college year, tables and room being decorated in patriotic colors and flowers.

Feb. 26, 1927
Battle Creek joined only last October in celebrating Dr. Kellogg’s 50th anniversary as superintendent of the Sanitarium. During this half century, the noted author, surgeon and philanthropist has developed a system of health principles which have attracted world-wide attention.

Local Club Active.

Members of the Three-Quarter Century club here are among those who will shower Dr. Kellogg with greetings and birthday cards tomorrow. He was elected president of the club two years ago, because of his interest in the organization and in longevity. On Saturday, however, he will be eligible to full membership.

During this time in which he has been actively interested in this unique local organization, Dr. Kellogg has extended many courtesies to the Three-Quarter Century club. It was explained by Charles H. Wheelock, secretary of the club, that only the reason of the year prevented a gathering of the organization in honor of this birthday.

Had Forgotten Occasion.

"To tell the truth I had forgotten all about tomorrow," Dr. Kellogg told The Morning Journal today when reminded of his birthday. "Birthdays are just the same as other days to me. I am not celebrating and for my part, I prefer to have my friends let it slip by too."

Dr. Kellogg added, however, that he is feeling young and is attending to the rush of business that is keeping him too much occupied to remember personal dates.

At the Sanitarium it has long been regarded as remarkable, the manner in which Dr. Kellogg has kept up his tremendous pace of consultation with patients, surgical operations, development of new discoveries in science, his writing and other activities, with no let-down whatever from his earlier days.

Sponsors Local College.

Though various schools had been maintained at the Sanitarium for many years, the educational work was consolidated by Dr. Kellogg in 1923 in Battle Creek College. He is now chairman of the board of directors of the College and this institution undoubtedly holds first place in his interest.

His first volume was “Plain Facts,” written in 1877. The first edition of his famous “Home Book of Modern Medicine,” appeared in 1889. He has been editor of Good Health magazine since 1873. During the years of his activity here he has issued many books on health subjects which have gained wide circulation.

At Dr. Kellogg’s request, no formal recognition of his birthday tomorrow will be made at the Sanitarium.
GANDHI METHOD SEEN GERMANS' FUTURE POLICY

Through Paying Reparations, Noted Economist Tells Miamians

Germany is through paying reparations and if France should re-occupy German territory the answer will be passive resistance following the example of Gandhi in India. Prof. Gero von Gaevernitz, noted German economist, asserted in addressing a group of Miamians last night at a dinner given by Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, at his Miami Springs sanitarium.

Hitler will gain control of the German government next spring unless Bruening ends the payment of reparations, he predicted, explaining that this is the vital political question in Germany today. If reparations payments are stopped, Germany can and will pay its private debts, he believes, but if not the United States will get nothing.

Professor Gaevernitz, as member of the reichstag during the early years of the war, was a leader of opposition to measures resulting in the entry of the United States in the World War. He regards the famous "14 points" as the personification of the factor that broke Germany's war spirit and defeated its armies, asserting that they convinced the men at the front they would result in the earliest possible peace. In addition, they had been fighting. Through the Dawes plan and the Young plan, he added, the United States saved Germany from chaos after it.

At present, he explained, there are only two live forces in Germany and these are led by Hitler on one side and the Communists on the other.

The German economist, now professor emeritus of Freiburg university, lauded Dr. Kellogg, whom he credited with rescuing him to new life after a complete breakdown during a lecture tour as the first German to be invited to address leading American universities after the war. His rejuvenation, he said, was spiritual and mental as well as physical. His son, Gero von Gaevernitz, jr., a representative of the United States for the last seven years, accompanied him. They will return to New York soon and Professor Gaevernitz will then call for Germany.

THREE SCORE AND TEN CLUB THREE YEARS OLD

Anniversary Observed With Founder and First President Still In Office

Three years ago today a group of septuagenarians organized the Three Score and Ten club in Miami, with Thomas S. Meek as founder and president. Celebrating its anniversary, the president, who is still in office, reported a membership of 1,354.

The club was the first of its name to be organized, Mr. Meek said, but there are associated groups now in seven other American cities, having the same name and objectives.

The Miami club has entertained at an informal party of one kind or another every day, except Sunday, since it was organized. The average daily attendance is 100, Mr. Meek said.

Every Tuesday a round table discussion of pertinent questions is conducted at the club, featuring five-minute addresses by members. Among the speakers at these events have been Congressman Ruth Bryan Owen and Dr. John Henry Kellogg.

The general meetings are conducted Thursday afternoons in First Christian Church. Entertainment and business occupy attention at these.

The club maintains rooms in the Venetian arcade, Mr. Meek said, and is legally chartered as a corporate body. The aim for 1932 is to establish a Three Score and Ten club in every American city of more than 25,000 population, the president said. A national federation is another objective.

"The club has been a source of happiness to many elderly persons," Mr. Meek said. "The only requisite for membership is that the applicant is 70 years of age or over."
'BACK TO NATURE' FOOD LAW URGED

Kellogg Tells Restaurateurs Need of Less Meat, Sugar, More Greens.

"Dr. Kellogg, whose topic was "The Restaurant’s Opportunity As a Health Leader," was one of the principal speakers at the morning session at the Jefferson County Armory. On the same programme was Mark Levy, Chicago, chairman of the Brokerage Division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, who spoke on "Selecting a Restaurant Location and Making Leases."

Dr. Kellogg said the keynote for the highest level in the art and science of human feeding is eugenicism. He explained that to eat biologically is simply to eat scientifically and normally. He said the human race exploits the bills of fare of the entire animal world without having the digestive apparatus adapted to so complicated and difficult a task. With the man-like apes, the chimpanzee and the curang-outang, man has a simple digestive machine adapted to fruits, nuts, soft grains, juicy roots, eggs and milk, he declared, adding that with this simple stomach of the primate he attempts even more than the gastronomic stunts of the barnyard fowl, the quadruped stomach of the bovine, or the seven-gastric-powered digestive machine of the whale.

Doctors Would Starve.

"The fact that you are assembled here today to discuss questions relating to healthful eating," Dr. Kellogg continued, "heralds the dawn of a new era in matters dietetic. The modern caterer is expected to think of wholesomeness as well as savory attractiveness, thus opening up an almost unparalleled opportunity for high public service. If every eating place, or even a large share of our cafes, restaurants and cafeterias, could be brought to scientific feeding, half the doctors of the country would starve, or retire to other vocations, and the death rate would fall to unprecedented figures. The dentists, too, would soon find a lessened demand for their services. Nutrition is the foundation of physical health, personal or national. There is no means by which nutrition and health may be more efficiently promoted than by raising the standard of excellence in our public eating places.

"What we eat today is walking around and talking tomorrow. We are made of what we eat, mind and manners as well as brain, bones and muscles and even morals."

Dr. Kellogg said more use of natural foods is one of the first steps to be taken. There is need for much larger use of fresh foods, cooked and uncooked, and particularly of such green stuffs as lettuce, romaine, chard and other salad greens, as through lack of vitamins, he pointed out, nearly the whole population is anaemic, below par in efficiency, lacking in endurance and resistance to disease.

The speaker attributed a wholesome modification of the national bill of fare to steady decline in the per capita consumption of meat, reduced one-half within a century. He urged insistence on fresh meat and the use of meat as a condiment rather than a staple food. He deplored the extravagant use of cane sugar among Americans, and referred to the Hebrew dietary laws as wise."
REVISED BOOK IS PUBLISHED

IS IN SEVENTH EDITION

Late Research and Practice Contained in Work Published by Funk & Wagnalls.

New revised edition of "The Itinerary of a Breakfast" written by Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, has just appeared from the presses of Funk & Wagnalls company of New York City. Wide distribution was reported on the previous editions of this same work by the local surgeon and author.

Announcement of the publisher pronounces this new work "was fascinating as a book of travels."

"You will learn enough from this book in half-an-hour's reading to save you many hours of headaches, misery and enforced absence from your work. In it you will find the true secret of most of your 'spells,' your 'tired feeling,' your inefficiency and you will see how easy it is to get rid of them all."

Though this work is now revised and new, the general itinerary of the breakfast has not been changed. In fact this work just issued is based upon six previous editions. Its new matter embraces all that current research and recent practice have proved advisable.

The work deals largely with constipation, auto-intoxication and toxemia, conditions which it is claimed are responsible for a large number of disease and much of the illness that exists. In this volume, the author explains in clear, non-technical language all phases of the many problems of elimination without recourse to confusing and unintelligible technical terms.
DR. KELLOGG IS AT HOME AGAIN

After Completing His Seventh European Tour.

IS IN SPLENDID HEALTH

Brought Home So Much Scientific Apparatus, Train Was Held 10 Minutes.

Although tanned by African suns, and in the dark clothes he dons while traveling, he appears exactly the same as he did when he began his tour last October, and there is nothing to suggest that he passed his seventy-fourth milestone during his absence.

Dr. Kellogg comes home, "loaded down with scientific honey." He has visited all the great medical centers of Europe, and glimpsed something of their greatest discoveries and research. The Wolverine, upon which he came to Battle Creek, was halted for nearly ten minutes while his impedimentia was being taken off.

There is delicate apparatus such as America has never seen before. There are bulky machines that will greatly increase the efficiency at the Sanitarium. There are trunks and trunks of books, and manuscripts and medical material indescribable.

This was Dr. Kellogg's first visit to Europe since the war, and it was scarcely less than a continued ovation. Before he had been in London 48 hours he was a dinner guest of Lord and Lady Dawson. The next day, he was an honor guest at the British Royal Society of Medicine, and his address there was given much prominence in the British Medical Journal.

Not one day passed while he was in England that he was not feted by some member of the English Royalty. And his tour through other countries was a replica the reception there.

Dr. Kellogg is rather modest about it all. "You understand, it wasn't me they wanted to see. They wanted to hear about the Sanitarium. To learn more about this biologic living we make our ideal. They're interested in it."

And, therein, is the secret of most of Dr. Kellogg's enthusiasm. All Europe is beginning to show interest in his biologic living. In London, the greatest specialists are considering it, and a new health society, of which he has been made a member, is being formed.

Renowned laboratories are studying it in research, and in many places, institutions patterned after the local Sanitarium are being organized.

He is pleased with the enormous progress that has been made since his last visit, and pleased with the many things he will be able to initiate into the Sanitarium.

And in the care of A. J. Bloese, his secretary, there are stacks of writings, medical theses that will be soon put in print, and the completed manuscript of a new book.

Dr. Kellogg's writing has been so intensive that the title of a new book is of little importance to him. "I forget which one, I finally did use. There were several I was planning."

He seemed glad to be back at the Sanitarium which he first remembers as a small two-story building fifty years ago, and anxious to inaugurate the valuable things he brought back with him.

And, while he is fairly brimming with his new discoveries, he still has his respect for American medicine. "American doctors are as good as European, and I would never advise anyone to go overjust for study. But to go for exchange of ideas, and to compare note, as it were, that is the thing."

Delayed by heavy weather some five hundred sea miles out, the Carmania and Cameronia, which should have docked yesterday, will not dock until today. The Celtic is also delayed, and may not dock until tomorrow.

The Atlantic Line’s Majestic, scheduled to arrive late this afternoon, is likely to arrive early tomorrow morning. The Majestic will bring 1,325 passengers from Southampton and Cherbourg. Of these, 636 are first-class passengers, 603 of whom are only accommodations of first-class cabin, a heavy mid-winter booking. Of special interest among those on board are Charles M. Schwab and Charles L. Lawrence. The former is president of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation and the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

GUEST OF ROYAL CLUB.

He is returning from a two months' inspection tour in the interest of the development of American aeronautics, to Lawrence, a pioneer in the aviation industry, spoke before the Royal Aero Club of France, and the French Aircraft Builders, on the subject of American aircraft engine development.

Others of note arriving on the Majestic are Prince and Princess Andrée Pouillic, Sir Robert Kindsley, chairman of Lazard Brothers & Company, Ltd., and Lady Kindsley; Sir George Croyden Narke, an engineer and patent expert; Baron H. Frankensfors: Howland Shaw, secretary of the American Embassy at Constantinople.

General Harold C. Bickford; G. H. Thompson, second secretary of the British embassy at Washington; Admiral Alfred Ellisson, Dr. John H. Kellogg, Dean of Battle Creek Sanitarium, T. H. Sheldon, aeronautical engineer of Harvard University; Mlle. Mansingerova, opera singer, and George Brownell, vice-president of the Erie Railroad, and Mrs. Brownell.

Representing the theatre on board the Majestic are H. H. Gillingespie, managing director of the Moss Empires, a chain of sixty-four theatres and music halls in Great Britain, and of the London Hippodrome, and Mrs. Mercer Hammerstein, A. E. Leng, English producer, who is associated with the Huberts.

SOCIETY REPRESENTED.

Passengers of interest to New York society include Mrs. H. P. Davison, returning with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Cheney, who have been spending their honeymoon abroad; Mr. Raymond Baker, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Browne, Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Clucas, E. W. Clucas, Jr., Miss Sara Clucas, John A. Gade, Miss Dorothy Inselin, Mrs. William Jay, Everett L. Judkins, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose E. Chambers and H. Durant Cheever.

Also on board are Charles Amory, of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Warren P. King, of Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. G. Brinton Roberts and H. G. Fetterolf, of Philadelphia, and Eric Muir Gamage, London merchant.

OFFICIALS ARE BID TO BANQUET

STATE OFFICIALS AND U. S. LEGISLATORS AS GUESTS AT KELLOGG DINNER

Senator Townsend, Unable to Attend, Pays Tribute; Women Included in Plans

With Fred W. Gage in charge of the program, all details of the testimonial banquet for Dr. J. H. Kellogg as the citizen who has done the most for furthering Battle Creek and her interests, are being worked out. The banquet is to be held at Post Tavern on Tuesday evening, April 26, and is to conform in every detail with the principles of eating advocated by Dr. Kellogg.

Though there was nothing in the invitations to so indicate, some have gathered the idea that the forthcoming banquet for Dr. Kellogg was for men only. This is not true. It is to be a mixed banquet. It is also pointed out that the $5 ticket covers not only the cost of the meal itself, but the participants' contribution toward the testimonial that will be given Dr. Kellogg.

The changing of Otis Skinner's date at Post theatre from Tuesday to Wednesday evening of next week simplifies an unpleasant conflict over dates, as originally the Skinner engagement was scheduled for the same evening as the banquet.

Invitations have been extended to a number of Dr. Kellogg's intimate friends and associates, including state officials and a number of legislators at Washington, D. C. The following tribute was paid to the head of the Sanitarium by Senator Charles E. Townsend of this district, who has found it impossible to attend:

"I regret my inability to be with you more than I can tell you, for I have great and unbounded respect for Dr. Kellogg. He has not only been a real asset to Michigan and to Battle Creek in particular, but I believe he has been a benefactor to mankind. He is a man of brains and ideals and his life teachings and works have been greater and more beneficial than can be measured or calculated. Your organization does well to honor such a man while he still lives.—Sincerely yours,

"Charles E. Townsend."

Seventy-five Year Olds Attend Organization Meeting; Dr. Kellogg Speaks

By MAE C. RAYMOND

The presence of Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, head of Battle Creek Sanitarium, was an important feature of the Battle Creek Three-Quarter Century Club which was organized at the Battle Creek Mission last Tuesday. The founder and first president of the Battle Creek Sanitarium and the long-time director of the Battle Creek Medical Mission, was the only person of the original twenty-four members of the club who was present at the organization meeting.

The meeting was held in the Chase Room of the Battle Creek Hotel. The officers of the club were elected as follows:

President, C. H. Wheeler; vice-president, H. J. Sherlock; secretary, L. E. Anderson; and treasurer, W. J. L. Anderson.

The club was organized on the plan of a company which was started in 1858. The object of the company was to provide a place for the insurance of the members and to provide a place for the insurance of the members.

He Didn’t Say It

ROGER W. BABSON, at Mountain Lake, read our editorial of yesterday morning, which expressed surprise at statements comparing California and Florida climate, to the latter’s discredit, ascribed to Dr. John Harvey Kellogg by the Los Angeles Times. Mr. Babson evidently experienced the same sense of surprise and got into immediate communication with Dr. Kellogg at Miami. As a result, Mr. Babson wired us as follows:

Regarding editorial in this morning’s Tribune, I have today talked with Dr. Kellogg and learn he has not been in California since 1928 and that he never compared California and Florida climate as represented. He once recommended a woman who lives in Battle Creek to go to California, because she has relatives there, and “because the Miami sunshine is not needed for her special physical defect.” Dr. Kellogg is more enthusiastic for Florida than ever. Incidentally, today is his 89th birthday, which finds him in perfect health and working 12 hours a day at his wonderful Miami Battle Creek sanatorium.

Our quotation was from a story in the Los Angeles Times of Sunday, February 16, which, as we stated in the editorial, claimed that Dr. Kellogg had made the statements quoted “in a recent letter”; also that “although business affairs have compelled him to spend his past several winters in the Everglades state, the Doctor has spent two winters in Southern California.” We have always had the idea, from his published statements and interviews, that the Doctor’s residence in Florida and his establishment here of a famous resort for health-seekers and longevity-seekers, has not been the result of any compulsion, business or otherwise; but that, acting on his own advice to others, he has spent as much of his time as possible in Florida, thus deriving himself the benefits of a climate and environment which, to take his own testimony, assure better health and greater longevity (with good prospect of living past the century mark) than any other spot on earth.

We are glad that Mr. Babson read our editorial and that he got in touch with Dr. Kellogg, bringing out the Doctor’s denial of the Los Angeles Times report. The fact that the Doctor, on his 89th birthday, is “in perfect health and working 12 hours a day” at his Florida institution and that he hasn’t been in California in 13 years is sufficient refutation of the Los Angeles assertion that he believes California climate more healthful than Florida’s—and also confirms the Doctor’s own professional and scientific judgment that Florida climate, environment and citrus fruit are more conducive to longevity than those of any other spot on earth, as convincingly stated in his “10 points” of several years ago.
Dr. Vaughan's Message

In the letter he paid high tribute to Dr. Kellogg, saying:

"The name of Kellogg will always stand foremost in the history of preventive medicine in not only Michigan but throughout our country. Dr. Kellogg's pioneer work with the state board of health 50 years ago paved the way for the present day system of health education. I have frequently referred to the bold attitude which he and Dr. Henry Baker assumed toward the communicability of tuberculosis. Even before Koch discovered the tuber bacillus, basing their judgment upon the animal experiments of Villemen, they were convinced that tuberculosis was a communicable disease and they incorporated in the physiology books used throughout this state this viewpoint. Unquestionably, this is the most important single reason wherefore the tuberculosis death rate in Michigan remained for so many years far below the average for other states.

"Dr. Kellogg's contribution in the field of nutrition, house hygiene, and community sanitation, is too well known to require comment. He has been one of those unusual individuals who combined a lovable personality together with a leadership in medicine and surgery. I wish him good luck on the 60th anniversary of his continued service as medical superintendent of the Battle Creek Sanitarium."

Briefly Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg complimented Dr. Kellogg in a letter: "Dr. Kellogg is one of Michigan's great citizens. No man has made a finer contribution to human welfare."

Both letters will be read in full at the dinner tonight.

Friends and Admirers of Dr.
John Harvey Kellogg
Gather Tonight.

DR. VAUGHN PRAISES HIM

Friends and admirers will gather in the Sanitarium at 7 o'clock tonight to pay tribute to Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, and to compliment him on his unparalleled record of 60 consecutive years as superintendent of the Sanitarium.

At the request of the 84-year-old physician, brevity will be the keynote of the program. For Dr. Kellogg leaves Battle Creek Tuesday morning to attend a meeting of the American Public Health association. At that convention he will be similarly complimented as the oldest living member of the group, and one of 10 men who have been members of the organization for 40 years or more.

Ranking Oldest There

Among the guests will be Dr. Willoughby L. Godfrey, who, next to Dr. Kellogg, is the oldest living member of the Calhoun County Medical society, and Dr. William H. Haughey, third oldest living member of the society.

Tickets to the testimonial dinner will be on sale until 6 o'clock at the Sanitarium cashier's office and the Sanitarium news stand, and until 5 o'clock at the Sanitarium. Places are being set up in the Sanitarium dining room for 500 guests. However, all persons who wish to attend and are unable to secure tickets are invited to attend the after-dinner program, which is scheduled to start about 8 o'clock.

Dr. Bruce to Speak

Dr. J. E. Bruce, University of Michigan vice regent, will be the principal speaker. Others on the program will include: Dr. Elmer L. Eggleston, acting as toastmaster; Dr. A. B. Olsen, representing the Sanitarium family; Dr. Wilfrid Haughey, representing the Calhoun County Medical association; A. L. Miller, speaking in behalf of Dr. Kellogg's many layman friends and admirers; and Dr. Emil Leffler, Battle Creek college president.

In a letter received today by Dr. W. P. Martin, who has been acting as general chairman for the dinner, Dr. Henry Vaughan, Detroit public health commissioner, expressed regret that he would be unable to attend.

WILLARD LIBRARY HAS GIFT

Dr. J. H. Kellogg Presents Library
With "Leaven in the Levant."—Is Highly Recommended.

Persons desiring books at Willard library, especially persons interested in the situation in Turkey as exists today, will be deeply interested in a gift that has been made to the library by Dr. J. H. Kellogg. Dr. Kellogg has presented the library a volume of the Rev. Joseph Greene's well-known masterpiece, entitled "Leavening the Levant."

The book is highly attractive and bound, and has over 500 pages with three maps and one hundred illustrations. The author represents, with great accuracy, it is said, the true state of things as they exist in the Ottoman empire today.

The Rev. James P. McNaughton, missionary from Turkey, who is at present stopping at the Sanitarium, and who has for many years been in close touch with affairs in Turkey, has written a brief review of the book especially for the Evening News, highly recommending it to readers.

Rev. McNaughton says:

"It differs from most recent books on Turkey in the accuracy of the situation presented. This is due to the fact that it is the work of a man, not only thoroughly competent by mental equipment, but also by an unusually long residence in the out parts of the empire of which he writes."

"Many of the books that pretende to give an account of the movements that are prominent in the contemporary history of the Levant are written by men who have never been in any of the countries of the Levant and are indebted to what others have written as the sources of their information."

"This is always unsatisfactory, for dependence on others is sure to lead to inaccuracies, and local color which is so essential to historical narrative is sure to be wanting."

"We have in the writer of the work before us, a man who for over a half century had the rare opportunity, not only of being a spectator of the unfolding of events that at last landed Turkey in the maelstrom of the European war, but was an active participant in the bold constructive reform that might have saved the Land of the Covenants from what was almost its elimination, as a political entity from the world's history."

"Dr. Greene's life in Constantinople covered the reign of Sultan Abdul Hamid II, the great reactionary, who abandoned the Levant nationality inherited by the various nations, and restored, in large measure, theocratic principles—over ideal of despotic government."

"The book is a history of the "Leaven," as the title implies, in an account of the reforms precipitated by the war. It is skillfully couched in the broader, comprehensible, liberal plans of reform proposed and formulated by the American missionaries."

"The constructive work was conceived upon the great lines, the evangelistic type, the various principles, including medical, educational, the medical and the literary, the social and the great movements that controlled the history of Turkey during the last half century. I know of no other volume that presents the subject with as much force and insight and broad intelligence as this book."
Dr. Kellogg is Taking 'Vacation' in His Home

Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, who announced several weeks ago that he planned to take an extensive vacation trip, said today, "I am taking a vacation right here at home."

He explained that he is avoiding participation in any activities other than those of great importance, and is getting considerable rest. He said he might take a trip in the near future, but has not decided definitely.

The 87-year-old founder of the Sanitarium was kept unusually busy for several weeks after returning last spring from his winter health resort in Florida, but since the reorganization plan of the Sanitarium was given final effect early last month, he has had an opportunity to relax.

He suffered a severe sore throat two weeks ago and Sanitarium physicians expressed the opinion he had overtaxed his strength and urged him to take a rest.

Dr. Kellogg Advises Old Folk at Picnic How to Live Longer

Dr. John Harvey Kellogg told members of the Three-Quarter Century club yesterday afternoon how they might not only live longer but enjoy their lengthened years.

The occasion was the club's annual picnic on the lawn at Sunshine Center on Wood street, at which Dr. Kellogg was host as well as a speaker, and at which 85 members of the club were present.

In his address, he called attention to himself as an illustration of the application of the rules of the biologic way of living. He is able to enjoy life because he lives in harmony with the club's motto, "Live a little longer."

Dr. Emil Leffler, who was also a speaker, emphasized that elderly persons can render a fine service by their experience and poise.

The outing began at 2:30 p.m. with the president of the club, the Rev. Dr. P. J. Maveety, presiding. Dr. E. M. Schaeffer led in a series of old-time hymns and songs in which all joined. Later Dr. Schaeffer sang two songs. Mrs. Anna Hubbard recited "Down on the Rio Grande." Selections were given by E. B. Brooks and M. E. Gray, violinists, with George W. Mitchell accompanying on the piano. George Riker, 88, danced to the music of a tambourine. After two encore, a moving picture of the dance was taken by Mr. Mattox. The Rev. A. L. Ellsworth and M. E. Gray sang an oldtime hymn and Mrs. Ernest Babcock gave a piano solo.

Lunch was served by Dr. Kellogg's secretaries, the Misses Mabel and Gertrude Estill. Two large bouquets of flowers, provided by Dr. Kellogg, were presented to the oldest man and woman present, Wesley Clark, 96, and Mrs. Mary Smith, 93.

Members were provided transportation to the picnic by the Rev. A. L. Ellsworth, Mahlon LaQuay, the Rev. T. G. Lewis, Dr. Kellogg and others.

San Board to Meet — The regular meeting of the Sanitarium board of trustees will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday. Several special matters relative to administration are listed on the agenda. Dr. Charles E. Stewart, president and executive officer, will preside in the absence of Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, who is on a two months' leave of absence.

STEWARD NAMED EXECUTIVE HEAD OF SANITARIUM

Appointment of Administrator to Aid Director Is Voted.

Appointment of Dr. Charles E. Stewart as director of the Sanitarium, filling an office which has been vacant since the institution returned to private management, was announced today. In the absence of a director, Dr. Stewart has served as executive officer as well as president of the board of trustees.

As director, Dr. Stewart will continue to supervise the Sanitarium's activities and policies. The board of trustees has authorized, also, the appointment of an administrator, to be associated with the director in carrying out details of administration.

Selection of the administrator will be considered at the next regular meeting of the board.

San to appoint new executive

Trustees Vote to Hire Assistant to Dr. Stewart in Managing Institution.

This Sanitarium board of trustees has voted to hire a new executive to assist Dr. Charles E. Stewart, president of the board, in managing the Sanitarium, it was announced today.

Dr. Stewart has been given the title of "Sanitarium director," and the new executive will be called the "Sanitarium administrator." The board has not yet selected the new executive.

Board members said the need for an additional executive has been foreseen for some time, it being felt that Dr. Stewart's present duties and responsibilities require more work than one person is physically able to do.

Dr. Stewart served as trustee of the Sanitarium while it was in receivership, and since the receivership was dissolved several months ago he has continued to serve as its chief executive.
Dr. Alexis Carrel, internationally-famous surgeon, who first proved tissue could be kept alive indefinitely and would grow and co-worker with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, world-famous aviator, on experiments to keep alive body organs, is discussing with Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, noted dietician and surgeon, the prolongation of human life while vacationing at Battle Creek sanitarium here. Dr. Kellogg is shown at the left and Dr. Carrel at the right in the above photo.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Protest statements by several organizations and individuals that a bicycle is "essential" for civilian transportation, and repeated requests for a swift release of restricted production, led to an announcement by the War Department that the bicycle would be made available to the public with certain restrictions.

The War Department announced that it would begin shipping bicycles to civilians, subject to certain conditions, effective immediately. The bicycles would be distributed through local warehouses, and individuals would be required to present a valid ID and a signed statement indicating the purpose of the bicycle.
