Introduction

In 2006, the Skillman Foundation embarked on a 10-year mission to improve the outcomes for children living in six neighborhoods in the city of Detroit. The intent was to accomplish this through a major community change initiative called Good Neighborhoods Initiative (GNI). This established effort now seeks to create and foster healthy, safe, and supportive neighborhoods that allow for the full development of children and youth.

The six Good Neighborhoods were identified based on a high concentration of children and young people living in low economic neighborhoods and the recognition that all neighborhoods possess assets that can be maximized to enhance the well-being of resident children. The neighborhoods selected were Chadsey/Condon, Vernor, Brightmoor, Cody/Rouge, Osborn and the Northend.

The foundation engaged two key partners to assist in the implementation of the Good Neighborhoods change initiative, The University of Michigan School of Social Work Technical Assistance Center (UM-TAC), and the National Community Development Institute (NCDI). Implementation of the Good Neighborhoods Initiative is modeled on the Skillman Foundation Theory of Change. The change process is based on three phases, namely Planning, Readiness and Transformation.

This retrospective focuses on the Planning Phase and presents an overview of the planning process within the Cody-Rouge Detroit community. The information contained in this retrospective is reflective only of the data available through files at the UM-TAC and/or content on the Bravelo website. The Bravelo website is an internet-based collaboration tool of the Good Neighborhoods work group.

The purpose of the Planning Phase was to engage residents and community stakeholders in a community-wide planning process that would result in a community goal and action plan that are community-owned and community-driven.

Planning Process

The planning process for the Good Neighborhood Initiative reflects the GNI core goals.

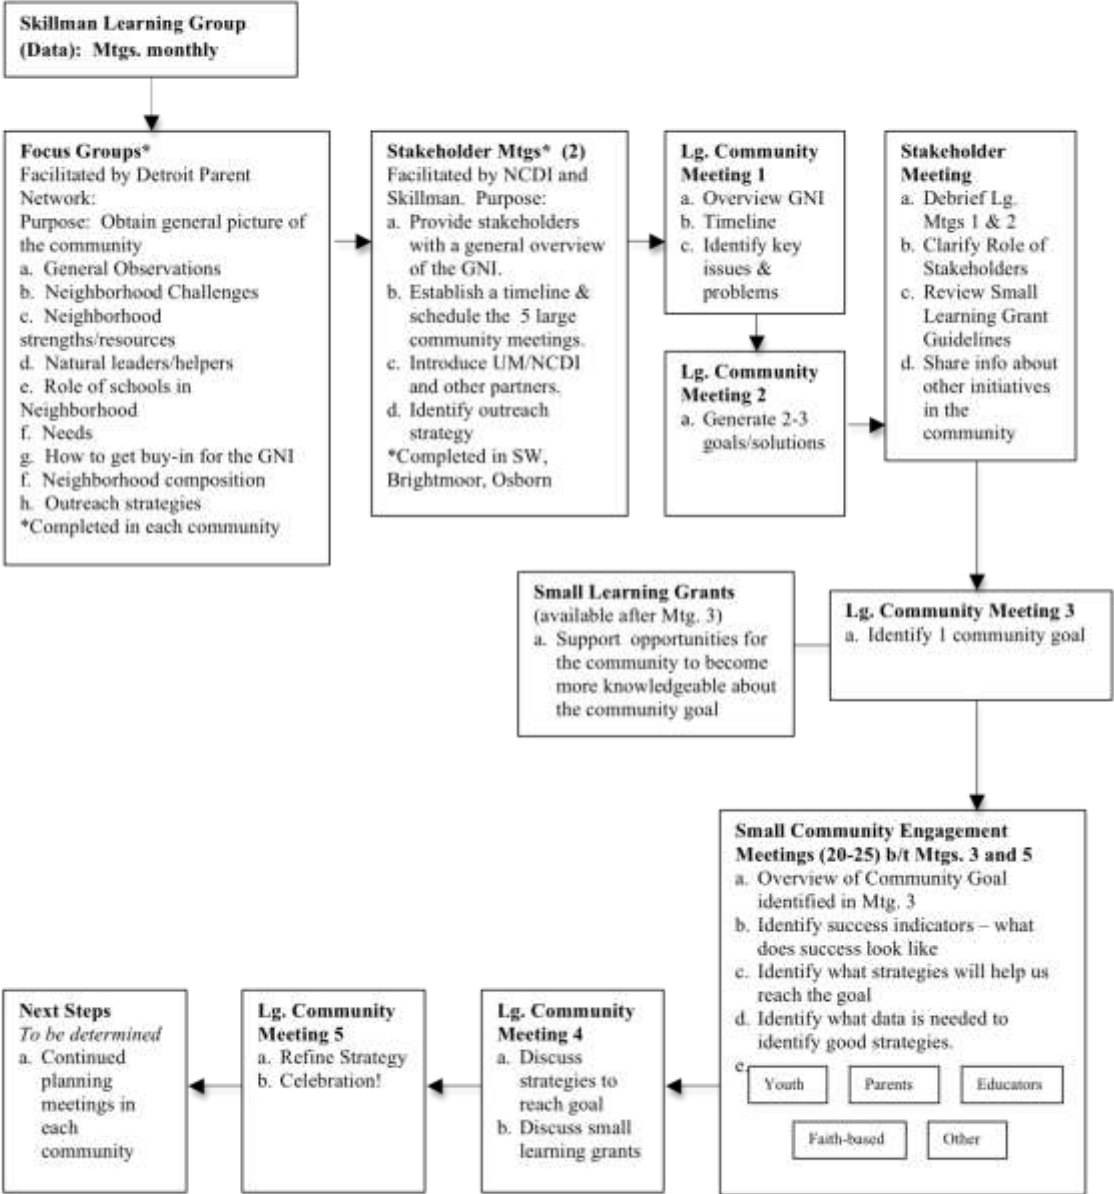

GNI Core Goals

- Community Assets and Initiatives: To maximize the assets, capacity, and impact of resources and institutions in targeted communities.
- Natural Helpers: To enable a cadre of “natural helpers” who are committed to providing services or supports for children.
- Neighborhood-based Human Delivery System: To establish effective neighborhood-based human service delivery systems for children, youth, and families.
- Child-Friendly Spaces: To improve the availability of child friendly spaces and the physical infrastructure of neighborhoods with large concentrations of children.
- Youth Development Programs: To increase opportunities for quality out-of-school time and youth development programs available to children and youth.
- Public/Private Investments: To increase public and private investments in neighborhoods to strengthen services and impact.
- Income and Wealth Building Strategies: To build the resiliency of children and families through income and wealth building strategies.

Planning Process Flowchart

The flow chart that follows presents the planning process sequence of activities.

Entry and Recruitment

This section documents the process for introducing Good Neighborhoods into the neighborhood and the way participants were initially recruited to participate in the planning process. The plan for entry and recruitment focused on facilitating community engagement meetings, focus groups, and stakeholder meetings. The anticipated goals of these discussions were to gain community commitment to the change initiative, solicit initial input into community issues that impact the well being of children, and gain a commitment to help engage the community in the Good Neighborhoods process.

This section was written based on available information from the Bravelo collaboration website. The available documentation contained some of the discussion sessions but left unclear how initial stakeholders were identified and selected. The following reflects the documented community engagement meetings in the Cody-Rouge neighborhood.

Focus Group Meetings

- Number of Meetings: 2
 - Dates: Thursday, April 27, 2006 (4:15-6:15pm) and Thursday, May 11, 2006 (7:30-9:30pm)
 - Location: Churches in Cody/Rouge
 - Facilitator: Detroit Parent Network
 - 15 participants (14 signed consent forms) at April meeting
 - 26 participants (24 signed consent forms) at May meeting
 - Participants answered questions about the Cody/Rouge community as a good neighborhood for children to grow up in; its challenges, strengths, resources, and natural leaders; the role of the schools; services and resources that would be most useful; community outreach strategies and activities that would get residents excited and committed to Good Neighborhoods; other activities in the neighborhood; and the upsides and downsides of the neighborhood as a place to live.
 - The number of years participants have lived in Cody/Rouge ranged from 1 year to 35, averaging 16.
 - The age of participants' children ranged from 1 to 67 years.
 - 50% of participants' children were between 0-18 years of age at the time of focus group.
- Observations:
- Focus Group Meetings achieved goal of soliciting input regarding neighborhood issues that impact children's well-being, but it is unclear whether future commitment to GN process was solicited or secured.
 - Two additional Focus Group Meetings were scheduled for March 30, 2006 and April 1, 2006 but were not convened due to low attendance.
 - The focus group report indicates that nine focus group questions elicited no response but includes no explanation for this missing information.

Small Community Engagement Meetings

These meetings occurred during the large community meetings.

- Number of Meetings: 21 scheduled
- Dates: October 31 – December 4, 2007 (between Community Meetings #3 & #5)
- Locations: Various in community (libraries, schools, churches and agencies)

 - All females
 - All males
 - Arab community/students
 - Block clubs
 - Businesses
 - Children (ages 5-6 & 7-10)
 - Faith-based organizations
 - Nonprofits
 - Parents (3 groups)
 - Pre-teens (ages 11-13)
 - Teachers/educators (2 groups)
- 6 – 14 participants per group (based on the 3 meeting notes that included this data)
- Meetings did not follow a uniform format, but most groups reviewed the community goal, defined success and identified strategies to obtain the goal.

- Facilitators invited participants to the upcoming Community Meeting.
- Themes from the first three Small Community Engagement Meetings were presented at Community Meeting #4 by TAC.
- Themes & Strategies from all documented Small Community Engagement Meetings were presented at Community Meeting #5 by TAC, as well as included in the resource binder used by Action Planning Teams to develop their action plans.

➤ Observations:

- Unavailable data:
 - Only 14 notes available – possible only 14 out of 21 scheduled meetings actually took place
 - Total number of participants (and names to track future participation in GN)
- Meetings seem to have engaged residents and stakeholders who had not previously participated in the GN planning process.
- By presenting the community goal and facilitating a discussion about outcomes and strategies related to this goal, meetings may have promoted ownership of the goal among participants.
- Community Liaison likely organized and attended meetings but is not mentioned in documentation.
- Stand-out meetings:
 - The faith-based meeting served as a catalyst for a faith-based alliance – the sign-in sheet was copied and shared with attending church leaders so that another meeting could be organized.
 - The Arab community/student meeting was held one day before Community Meeting #5 – an open discussion about goals and desires for the community was held, but neither shared themes from GN meetings nor barriers to the Arab-American community’s participation were identified.

Work Group Retreats

The large community meetings were followed by six work group retreats, held at Wayne State University. The purpose of these retreats was to develop action plans based on the strategies identified at the large community meetings. In preparation for these meetings, the UM-SSW TAC created binders that included the following six sections:

Section 1 – Introduction

1. Contact information for GN resource people
2. The roles of action planning team members
3. A map of the Skillman Good Neighborhoods

Section 2– What We Know About Our Neighborhood Right Now

Includes: (information was used during the community planning process)

- Maps
- Community profile
- Preliminary list of community assets and resources (a “living document” that is updated as the learning grants are completed)
- Selected indicators of child well-being
- Summary of the neighborhood focus groups conducted during the community planning process

- Themes and strategies developed by the small groups during the neighborhood planning process, that lead to the development of your community goal and strategy areas for the action planning teams

Section 3– What We Are Learning About Our Neighborhood Right Now

- The learning grants that are being implemented in the neighborhood

Section 4 – The Planning Process

- Action planning team meeting matrix
- Overview of the action planning process
- Step by step guide to completing the action planning process

Section 5– Helpful References

- Useful website resources for planning and data

Section 6 - Documenting the Work of the Action Planning Team

- Section to insert your sign-in sheets and meeting minutes

Prior to the retreats, NCDI hosted a training for all of the partners to prepare for the working retreats. Presentation of the materials in the binders was a key component of the training. The agendas for the training and the work group retreats follow.

Action Planning Teams

Action Planning Teams were formed based on the goals and strategies outlined at the community meetings.

- Attendees voted on the four Action Planning teams: Community Safety, Strong Families, High Quality Education, and Economic Development & Employment.
- Attendees from the Community Large Meetings were invited to join and form the Action Planning Teams based on interest and choice.
- Throughout the Action Planning Team Process, trainings were available for all members of Action Planning Teams. For example, on May 7, 2007, Dr. Larry Gant, Dr. Trina Shanks, and Kristin McGee held a workshop intended to meet other all those involved in an Action Planning Team as well as a template “action plan” and brainstorming session.
- Action Planning Teams also held “Report-Out” meetings for the whole community, in order for Cody-Rouge residents not involved in a certain Action Plan Team to hear and learn about each team’s progress and events.

Based on the minutes and notes posted on Bravelo, the following reflects the outcomes of the retreats in Cody/Rouge.

 - Strong Families: The evaluations were strongly positive. There was one comment concerning the process: I want to know... “process to start the goal process – zooming in on where to start?”

- ✓ Only one small grant – Kids Corps – is a result of the work of an Action Planning Team (Economic Development and Employment)
- ✓ Other small grants are related to the work of the four Action Planning Teams but do not seem to be working with or through the Teams.

Quarterly Community Meetings

Preparer's Analysis

This review of the Skillman Foundation's planning process in the Cody/Rouge neighborhood identifies a variety of themes related to documentation, outreach strategies and adherence to program design.

First, while a wide range of meeting agendas, notes and reports are posted to Bravelo, many of these important materials are missing. Access to sign-in sheets and registration forms would be particularly helpful in determining the total number of participants at each event. This retrospective relied on incomplete documentation to calculate attendance, such as the number of submitted evaluations (which likely underestimates the number of meeting participants). In addition, meeting notes submitted by trained recorders reflect inconsistent formats. Many notes do not include basic information, such as number and names of participants. A template for meeting notes may be helpful for future documentation. Moreover, posting of documentation of Action Planning Team meetings seems to have stopped after the paid recorders exited the process. Few Action Planning Team notes are available for meetings that took place after the Action Planning Team Retreat #3 in April 2008. Participants were given a brief overview of how to use Bravelo during Retreat #3; however, this training does not seem to have been effective. Perhaps, the resident co-convener for each Team (or the Community Liaison) should be held responsible for uploading all meeting notes.

Second, it was difficult to capture the planning process outreach strategy due to missing information. Documentation on Bravelo was limited for the Stakeholder Meeting proceedings and outcomes. Meeting evaluations did not often include a question regarding how the participant heard about the meeting. The one evaluation that did gather data about the effectiveness of a specific outreach strategy found that only 20% of meeting participants had heard the Skillman Foundation's radio advertisement for the meeting. Evaluations also did not request racial, ethnic or socioeconomic demographic information in order to illuminate the scope and diversity of participant composition. These data would help identify how representative participants are of the broader community. Available documentation seemed to indicate that ongoing outreach was not a priority after Community Meeting #5. There may have been missed opportunities to encourage Action Planning Teams to recruit more Team members and volunteers. Some Teams, however, seemed to naturally accomplish this continued outreach. The Community Liaison, whose presence is missing from most of the available documentation, also prioritized outreach efforts throughout the entire planning process. Related to the question of representation, it may be important to investigate the role of stakeholders in Cody/Rouge's planning process. Stakeholders may have dominated some small groups during Community Meetings and Action Planning Teams – the High-Quality Education Team, in particular. It might be interesting to compare this neighborhood's active participant composition to other Good Neighborhoods. Youth tended to account for the lowest representation at meetings, and almost every evaluation report included a comment requesting increased youth participation. It should be noted that the Community Liaison in Cody/Rouge has organized a Youth Council, which implemented a Youth Summit during summer 2008.

Finally, the available documentation indicates some variation in Action Planning Teams' understanding of the Action Planning process. The recorder of the Economic Development & Employment Team included the Action Planning Matrix and the Themes from the prior Community Meetings related to their goal in every set of meeting notes. Other Team facilitators appear to not have highlighted these documents as consistently. The neighborhood-level data, planning matrix and themes summary were key support tools that many facilitators may not have utilized as effectively as possible. A closer look at the Action Planning process for each Team in Cody/Rouge and in other Good Neighborhoods may reveal best practices for similar future goal-setting endeavors.

Overall, the available documentation indicates that the planning process in the Cody/Rouge neighborhood followed the Skillman Foundation's program design and resulted in thoughtful and exciting plans for resident-led community change.
