- b. I have the lawful authority to enter into this Agreement
- c. This work does not infringe on anyone else's rights
- d. I have cleared permissions for any embedded rights
- e. This work contains no obscene, defamatory, or otherwise unlawful material

2. Indemnify:

- a. If any of the above turns out not to be true and there are legal consequences arising, I hold the Publisher, etc., harmless

3. License:

- a. I grant the publisher a non-exclusive, perpetual license to publish the work under a Creative Commons Attribution NonCommercial-ShareAlike license
- b. Publisher may act on my behalf to improve discoverability/accessibility
- c. Publisher may use my name in connection with this work

The Creative Commons License:

<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/4.0/>

Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 4.0 International (CC BY-NC-SA 4.0)

This is a human-readable summary of (and not a substitute for) the license.

Disclaimer

You are free to:

Share — copy and redistribute the material in any medium or format

Adapt — remix, transform, and build upon the material

The licensor cannot revoke these freedoms as long as you follow the license terms.

Under the following terms:

Attribution — You must give appropriate credit, provide a link to the license, and indicate if changes were made. You may do so in any reasonable manner, but not in any way that suggests the licensor endorses you or your use.

NonCommercial — You may not use the material for commercial purposes.

ShareAlike — If you remix, transform, or build upon the material, you must distribute your contributions under the same license as the original.

No additional restrictions — You may not apply legal terms or technological measures that legally restrict others from doing anything the license permits.

On keeping your copyright:

- “When you assign copyright to publishers, you lose control over your scholarly output. Assignment of copyright ownership may limit your ability to incorporate elements into future articles and books or to use your own work in teaching at the University.” And those are by no means the only potential problems. That’s why we admonish authors never to assign a copyright to a publisher or to allow a book’s copyright to be registered in any name but the author’s. (Cornell University Copyright Information Center)
- “Students: Students hold the copyright in works they author, unless they have authored works as EMPLOYEES or transferred their copyright in writing to the University or other entity.” (University of Michigan SPG 601.28)
- Any journal where you want to publish should present you with an author agreement. You may not always have the power to negotiate the terms, and sometimes the tradeoff (i.e., prestige) may be worth it--but always know what you are signing up for and what the implications are and retain a copy of the executed agreement. Unless you have transferred copyright in the work in writing to another entity, YOU are the copyright holder.
- This being said, publishers do need latitude to act in certain ways for the benefit of the publication and the publisher (e.g., distributing in new formats, approving indexing, potentially: granting permissions, etc.) Copyright transfer is the easiest blanket way to do this. In this agreement we try to ask for only the permissions we need.
