The Library-Alumni Perspective

Kresge Library Services – Ross School of Business
• Resources Offered to Alumni
• Acquiring Resources for Alumni
• Services Offered to Alumni
• Coordination with Development and Alumni Affairs
Resources Offered to Alumni
- Found here: https://www.bus.umich.edu/kresgellibrary/services/alumni.html
- Initial focus is career resource & tools.
- Been expanded over the years
- Resources are electronically available to alumni no matter where they are (walk-in use, when available, is open to anyone)
- RossIT maintains a web-portal for Ross alumni – so they can authenticate from wherever they are
- Intended for personal use – but kinda hard (OK IMPOSSIBLE) to police
The Library-Alumni Perspective

- Resources Offered to Alumni
  - University of Michigan Alumni Association offers a suite of resources available with membership (ProQuest & Project MUSE) - http://alumni.umich.edu/educational-enrichment/online-publications-resources/

We also have a few discount programs (MarketResearch.com)

- Acquiring Resources for Alumni
  - Direct purchase
  - Negotiated Access (as extension of campus resource)
  - Kresge Library Direct Purchases < 1% of our current resource budget for alumni
  - THAT BEING SAID – it is still difficult to justify when you are cutting budgets
  - We have attempted to provide balance as best we can – even holding onto resources we may not love because they have alumni access.
The Library - Alumni Perspective

• Acquiring Resources for Alumni
  • Some resources maybe not cost much or anything, and be useful for alumni
  • https://kresgeguides.bus.umich.edu/rosshire

The Library - Alumni Perspective

• Services Offered to Alumni
  • Reference Services (phone, email, chat) – we use those resources that they have access to
  • Finding resources that they may also have access to (Michigan has a suite of business resources for all residents)
  • Syllabi Archives – We can assist alumni (who no longer have access) to find syllabus. Useful for graduate school or certification.

Survey Results (October 2017)

- Q15 - Please share any comments you have about alumni access to library resources and library services (selected comments):
- Allowing alumni would enormously increase our potential user numbers and would lead to massive price increases for databases because our database costs are based on user population.
- If the typical career path for graduates is in smaller businesses or even entrepreneurial activities, it would be valuable to have an agreement with a vendor that enabled limited access to some of our resources for 2-3 years after graduation, because the small businesses would be very unlikely to subscribe to these resources.
- Alumni access has been made easier for us by UK wide negotiations by JISC (Joint Information Systems Committee).
Survey Results (October 2017)

- Alumni ask for access all the time. We can’t even facilitate access to the resources that routinely license to alumni at no additional cost such as Project Muse or JSTOR because University IT is not motivated to implement authentication. University Alumni Office doesn’t see it as a priority either.
- Value of access to electronic resources is tricky. If we had alumni-specific collections, they wouldn’t receive the same content they had in school, so their perception of the value might be high at first, but very low once they realize what they have. Business students especially would be in for a rude awakening, as they expect access to market research reports and other privileged information.
- I work at a state university that consistently has budget problems. The only thing I ever do with collections is try to keep the few business databases we have from being cancelled. I can’t even imagine an environment at this university where we would be able to talk about alumni resources. That being said, it is common for our alumni to work with students in the business college, and I’m always happy to alumni use what we have available to them in-person in the library.
