Workplace Bullying in Healthcare

A presentation by Dr. Loraleigh Keashley on "Bullying in the Workplace," part of the Investing in Ability 2015 series of events. A side conversation arose during the event about an ongoing court case, in which a toxic work environment may have contributed to a patient's death.
Loraleigh Keashly is an associate professor in the Department of Communication at Wayne State University, Detroit. Her research, teaching and consulting focus on conflict and conflict resolution at the interpersonal, group, intergroup and organizational level. She is part of the core faculty of the MA in Dispute Resolution program at WSU, having served as Academic Director of the MADR for more than a decade.
