November Newsletter

Apologies for the double post, but there have been some updates to our programming!

Announcements

New Course Alert:

Sign up to COMM449I on ‘Studying Digital Humanities’, led by postdoctoral fellow Rianna Walcott.

‘How we study something can be just as important as what we study. This course introduces a variety of methods and approaches to collecting and interpreting digital materials.’

Spring 2024, TuThu, 3.30-4.45pm
New Course Alert:

Sign up to COMM498A, ‘Black Discourse in Digital Media’, led by BCaT director Catherine Knight Steele.

‘This course examines the connections between black discourse, oral culture, and traditional media with new digital media technology. Introduces various methods, theoretical approaches, and tools for studying social media and online communication.’

POSTPONED:

Our Winter Showcase has been postponed until the spring term - please watch this space for more details!
Resources from this event:

Thank you for attending our workshop hosted by the inimitable temi lasade-anderson on Reference Management with Zotero. temi has been kind enough to follow up with some resources:

Firstly, a tour of how temi uses Notion to project manage her PhD and secondly, information on how to move Zotero citations between Google Docs, Microsoft Word, and LibreOffice.

Upcoming Events

November Events

Join us in the lab this November during our regular hours of 10-3pm, Monday - Wednesday, and particularly on Wednesday 15th November between 12.30-1.30pm where we will be streaming a guest lecture by Dr Jenn M. Jackson:

In this talk, Jackson will discuss their concept of the "radical intersectional sphere," a site for the creation of movement organizing, radical rememory, and the building of revolutionary Black futures. This work extends beyond their... counterpublics and alternative spheres have young Black Americans already created to (re)imagine the potential for Black life?"

Learn More

BCaT Eats
Join us for our last BCaT Eats of the semester on Wednesday 29th November - this will be earlier than usual, join us from 3-5pm!
Our mailing address is:

Want to change how you receive these emails?
You can update your preferences or unsubscribe.