

1. What is your general impression of the OA publishing venues?
2. Do you contribute to OA outlets in any capacity?
3. When considering OA options for your own publications, are there any barriers you experienced or concerns you have as an author?
4. If you publish in OA venues charging Article Processing Charges (APCs), how do you pay for APCs?
5. Who do you think should pay to make scholarly output available in OA format?
6. Are you motivated to publish in OA journals? Why?
7. What factors do you prioritize when selecting a publishing venue?
8. What factors do you prioritize when citing a source?
9. What is your experience with preprints?
10. Have you observed any publishing practices that concern you? Please describe.
11. U-M Library supports OA initiatives, including HathiTrust, COPE, TOME, Deep Blue, etc. Additionally, U-M Library participates in programs that provide APC discounts for U-M authors (PLOS, Wiley, etc.). The Library is interested to learn your opinion about how or whether we should support open access to scholarly information. How would you like the library to engage or not engage in supporting U-M scholars' participation in open access scholarship?
12. What are you willing to trade in pursuit of a shift to more open scholarship (via APC support, transformative agreements, other)?
 1. Preferred publication venues
 2. Number of subscription journals/databases provided by U-M Library?
 3. Society benefits
 4. Speed in access to scholarly content (waiting for ILL vs. immediate access)?
 5. Other?