

Acknowledgements

First of all, I would like to thank co-chairs of my dissertation committee, Julia Adams and Michael Kennedy. Julia has been a wonderful mentor ever since I came to the University of Michigan in 2001. Without her constructive feedback and continuous encouragement, I would not have been able to complete the dissertation. Along with Julia, Michael has helped me grow as a social theorist of cosmopolitanism. The dissertation is culmination of what I began to explore in his seminar on global transformations at the International Institute in 2002. I also would like to thank the other three dissertation committee members, Howard Kimeldorf, John Campbell, and Ram Mahalingam. In Howard's comparative-historical practicum I learned how to collect and analyze data. John's seminar on Japanese politics revived my interest in Japan. Becoming a member of Ram's laboratory led me to pursue a synthesis of sociological and psychological theories. The dissertation is a product of my encounters and subsequent conversations with all the five committee members.

Second, I would like to thank institutions that provided me with fellowships and grants for fieldwork and writing-up: the Sociology Department, the Center for Japanese Studies, International Institute, and Horace Rackham Graduate School at the University of Michigan and the American Council for Learned Societies.

Finally, I would like to thank students and teachers in Aichi Prefecture, Japan, who participated in my study. I hope the dissertation repays their kindness by offering them new insight into cultural and educational practices of their everyday life.

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements.....	ii
List of Figures.....	vii
List of Tables .....	viii
Chapter
1. Cosmopolitanism in the Age of Globalization.....	1
Cosmopolitanism in a Global World .....	4
Education and Youth: Mechanism and Process.....	7
Finding Cosmopolitanism in Japan.....	9
Multi-method Approach to Cosmopolitanism .....	14
2. A Genealogy of Normative Cosmopolitanism in Japanese Education.....	19
Introduction of Normative Cosmopolitanism, 1945-1947 .....	23
Coupling of Normative Cosmopolitanism with Nationalism, 1951-1971 .....	29
Rearticulation of Normative Cosmopolitanism with Globalization, 1971-2006 ...	35

Conclusion .....	40
3. Normative Cosmopolitanism inside Schools .....	42
Social Studies.....	43
Moral Education.....	50
Conclusion .....	59
4. Cosmopolitanism as a Multiplication of Attachments .....	62
Actor-Network Theory of Cosmopolitanism.....	62
Method and Data.....	66
Preschoolers and Second Graders.....	68
Sixth and Eighth Graders .....	71
College Students .....	73
Multiple Attachments .....	77
Conclusion .....	79
5. Cosmopolitanism as Relational Cognition.....	81
“Nation” as Cognition: Nationalism versus Cosmopolitanism.....	82
Method and Data.....	84
Results.....	87
Biological Determinism .....	89
Cultural Determinism.....	90

Cosmopolitanism .....	92
Interdependent Self .....	95
Conclusion .....	98
6. The Future of Cosmopolitanism.....	100
Looking Forward .....	104
Appendix.....	113
Bibliography .....	117

List of Figures

Figure 2.1 Two Meanings of Normative Cosmopolitanism .....	38
Figure 3.1 South Korea in the Sixth-Grade Geography Textbook .....	49
Figure 6.1 Relationship among Globalization, Cosmopolitanism, and Education .....	103

List of Tables

Table 4.1 National Attachment across Age Groups.....	68
Table 5.1 Pride .....	87
Table 5.2 Loyalty .....	88
Table 5.3 College Students (Loyalty) .....	94