Perspectives from comparative politics:

- ‘democratic transitions’ literature (80s-90s)
  (democratic development / reversals in Latin America, Africa, East and Southeast Asia; post-Soviet transitions)

Some key points:

- Multidirectionality and dynamism of democratic change (against either/or classifications);
- Linkages between domestic and transnational process (‘waves of democracy’ debate)
- General categories, typologies, or trajectories of democratic change
Definitions of democracy (Charles Tilly, Democracy)

- Def’n: “A regime is democratic to the degree that political relations between the state and its citizens feature broad, equal, protected and mutually binding consultation.” (14)

- Breadth: extension of rights of participation to steadily larger segments of the population

- Equality: collapsing / equalizing the categories of citizenship and forms of participation vis-à-vis the state

- Protection: against arbitrary exercise of state power

- Mutually binding consultation: clear and enforceable obligations on part of state in response to recognized consultative processes

State capacity (Charles Tilly, Democracy)

- State capacity: “the extent to which interventions of state agents in existing non-state resources, activities, and interpersonal connections alter existing distributions of those resources, activities, and interpersonal connections as well as relations among those distributions” (the efficacy of democratic politics)

  (e.g. the ‘hollowing out’ of the state – decision-making power moves ‘up,’ ‘down’ or ‘outside’ of the state, taking effective decision-making power out of the space of (democratic) public politics)

Typologies / tensions of deliberative democracy
(Gutmann & Thompson)

instrumental vs. expressive procedure vs. substance
consensual vs. pluralist
representative vs. participatory government vs. civil society
domestic vs. international/cosmopolitan

~~~ questions and discussion? ~~~
Picking ONE of the examples of National Issue Forums, deliberative polling, or citizen juries, analyze the potential advantages and barriers, and describe one or more strategies, for extending this practice into online space. (Your example could be either wholly online, or some sort of in-space / online hybrid). What specific deliberative affordances or limits does your proposed project enhance or address? (be specific – draw on Gutmann & Thompson, McAfee, etc. where useful)
