7 March, Week 1: Introduction to Contracting and Signaling Objective: Why does it matter for a transaction or agreement that the two (or more) parties have different information? What are the fundamental issues for structuring transactions or designing agreements when there is asymmetric information?

Mandatory Read:

- 1 Pratt, John W. and Richard J. Zeckhauser, "Principals and Agents: An Overview", in Principals and Agents: The Structure of Business, J. W. Pratt and R. J. Zeckhauser, eds. (Harvard Business School Press, 1985), pp. 1-24 (UR)

14 March, Week 2: Hidden Action I Objective: What is a "hidden action" problem? What constraints does hidden action impose on agreements between self-interested individuals and organizations? What general design principles do we know for contracts in this situation?

Mandatory Read:

1. Milgrom, Paul and John Roberts, Economics, Organization & Management (Prentice-Hall, 1992), ch. 5, pp. 127-149 (UR)

21 March, Week 3: Hidden Action II: Principles for Incentive Design Objective: Most professional jobs involve elements of hidden action. What design principles are there for compensation schemes that ameliorate this problem?

Mandatory Read:

- 1 Eisenhardt, K. (1989). "Agency Theory: An Assessment and Review". Academy of Management Review, 14(1), 57-74. (CT)

26 March: Assignment 1 Due, 12 noon

28 March, Week 4: Hidden Information I Objective: Sometimes one party to a transaction or agreement cannot directly observe, or at least not verify to a third party, quality or knowledge or other relevant information about the other party to the agreement. What implications does "hidden information" have for the terms and conditions of agreements (e.g., professional service or consulting contracts)? How should licensees structure licenses to obtain technology when they know less about the quality of the technology and how to use it than does the licensor?

Mandatory Read:

1. MS-PC pp. 103-116

Supplementary Read:

11 April, Week 6: Signaling and Screening Objective: Sometimes a party to an agreement or transaction would like to make known his or her hidden information (e.g., if she very high quality), but there are no direct ways to verify that information. How might a high quality type signal her quality? How might an email recipient set up a screen that induces senders to reveal whether they are sending spam?

Mandatory Read:
