

Toys Make A Nation: A History of Ethnic Toys in America

by

Sarah Zenaida Gould

A dissertation submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy
(American Culture)
in the University of Michigan
2010

Doctoral Committee:

Professor Philip J. Deloria, Co-Chair
Associate Professor Kristin A. Hass, Co-Chair
Associate Professor James W. Cook, Jr.
Associate Professor Charles McGovern, College of William and Mary
Professor Kathy Peiss, University of Pennsylvania

© Sarah Z. Gould

---

2010

Acknowledgements

This project would not have been possible without the generous support and assistance of others.

My research was supported by a Rackham Merit Fellowship from the University of Michigan, a short-term fellowship at the Winterthur Museum, the Jay and Deborah Last Fellowship at the American Antiquarian Society, and a predoctoral fellowship at the National Museum of American History (NMAH), Smithsonian Institution. Additionally, the University of Michigan's Sweetland Writing Center provided me with a Dissertation Writing Fellowship. These fellowships provided not only funding, but also access to amazing scholars, librarians, curators, and archivists. I would like to especially thank Jeanne Solensky at Winterthur, Gigi Barnhill, Laura E. Wasowicz, and Paul Erickson at the American Antiquarian Society, Fath Davis Ruffins, William Yeingst, Steve Velazquez, and Pete Daniel at NMAH, the entire staff at the NMAH Archives Center, Mike Hardy at the Smithsonian Institution Research Annex Library, and Paul Barron at the Sweetland Writing Center.

A number of museum curators and collectors enthusiastically shared their knowledge and collections with me. These include: Jeanine Head Miller at the Henry Ford Museum; Barbara Whiteman at the Philadelphia Doll Museum; Patricia Hogan, Susan Asbury, and Carol Sandler at the Strong Museum; Glenda Beltran at the Alexander Doll Company; Alexander Doll collectors Pat Burns, Chip Barkel, Lia Sargent, and Barbara Lamb; puzzle expert Anne Williams; and Bruce Whitehill and Alex G. Malloy of the Association of Game and Puzzle Collectors.

At the University of Michigan I have learned a great deal from my colleagues. My cohort members Jan Bernabe, Laura Hymson, Afia Ofori-Mensa, and Erin Pipkin, as well as Sahand Rahnama-Moghadam, Jason Chang, Will Mackintosh, and Victoria Castillo provided support and an occasional needed distraction. I would also like to thank Afia for inviting me to join JJAM and the Hollagrams. Jimmy Draper, Jamie Small, and Afia were wonderful writing group partners.

Many thanks are due to my dissertation co-chairs Phil Deloria and Kristin Hass. I would also like to thank committee members Jay Cook, Kathy Peiss, and Charlie McGovern. Finally my thanks to Marlene Moore in the Program in American Culture who has answered every one of my questions over the last eight years, my mom who has read more than a few drafts, and my family who have stopped asking me when I am going to graduate.

Table of Contents

|                  |  |     |
|------------------|--|-----|
| Acknowledgements |  | ii  |
| List of Tables   |  | v   |
| Chapter One      | Toys Make A Nation: An Introduction to Toys and Childhood              | 1   |
| Chapter Two      | Paper and Iron: The Origins of Ethnic Imagery in Toys                  | 36  |
| Chapter Three    | Doll Diplomacy: Learning How to Get Along with International Playmates | 106 |
| Chapter Four     | Racially Aggressive Boys' Toys   | 166 |
| Chapter Five     | The Rise and Fall of Minority Owned Toy Companies                      | 226 |
| Conclusion       | The Post-Racial Toy Business?  | 269 |

List of Tables

Tables

Table 1                      A history of Hasbro subsidiaries & brands                      258

Table 2                      A history of Mattel subsidiaries & brands                      258