The case for frugal default options in patient–doctor communication

Angela Fagerlin PhD

Ann Arbor VA HSR&D Center for Practice Management and Outcomes Research; Division of General Internal Medicine, University of Michigan; Center for Behavioral and Decision Sciences in Medicine, Ann Arbor, Michigan, USA doi:10.1111/j.1365-2753.2010.01404.x
Our country needs to rethink our health care system and find ways in which we can reduce health care costs while also maintaining the care of our citizens. Bogdan-Lovis and Holmes-Rovner have proposed a method that is both feasible and which will preserve patient autonomy, yet significant in its potential system-wide implications. It is critical that policy makers, doctors and social scientists strongly consider the recommendations made in their article.

Acknowledgements
The author is very grateful for the helpful comments she received from Brian Zikmund-Fisher on a previous version of this paper. The opinions expressed in this article are solely those of the author and are not reflective of the opinions of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

References