Change

It is clear that our state is in the midst of a profound transition...

...from an industrial economy based upon the abundance of natural resources, unskilled labor, and, to some degree, constrained, slowly moving domestic markets...

To a knowledge-based economy, characterized by intensely competitive world markets, rapid change, and--most important of all--educated people and their ideas.

Michigan as a state is changing very rapidly...

This has not been...and will not be...an easy transition to make.

The impact of these changes are already painfully apparent to Michigan's workers and industries.

The truth is that the outcome is still very much in doubt!

Whether we will emerge from this transition as a world economic leader once again...with a strong, prosperous--albeit new--economy producing jobs and improving our quality of life.

Or whether we will fail to heed the warnings...

...to make the necessary investments and sacrifices today necessary for strength and prosperity tomorrow...

And become an economic backwater in the century ahead.

It is clear that we have arrived at a fork in the road ahead.

My central theme is that education, broadly defined, will be the pivotal issue in determining which of these two alternative futures will be Michigan's...and America's. Indeed, I am absolutely convinced that the dominant issue of the 1990s will be the development of our human resources. Previous economic transformations were closely associated with major public investment in infrastructure such as railroads, canals, electric networks, and highways. In the coming economic transition, an equivalent infrastructure will be an educated population.

Choice

We recognize that the choices before Michigan are not easy.

We must address pressing social issues of employment, health, social welfare, we must meet the important needs of our citizens today.

But also we must balance these immediate needs with investment in our future.

If we don't invest in cures, our symptoms will, in time, become fatal...

For generations, the people of Michigan sacrificed so that their children could have a better life.

They had faith in education.

We must rekindle that faith and that commitment to the future today.

We must care for our children's future as much as we attempt to our present needs and desires.

Responsibility

Years ago our parents stepped up to their responsibilities by sacrificing to give us an opportunity for a better life through education.

Now it is our generation's turn.

Today we are called upon to demonstrate a similar commitment to our children...to the next generation...to the future.

Education represents one of the most important investments a society can make in its future...since it is an investment in its people...

It is indeed the case that our state and our nation have developed the finest systems of public education in the world...

But we must also remember this resulted from the willingness of past generations to look beyond the needs and desires of the present and to invest in the future by building and sustaining educational institutions of exceptional quality--

Institutions that have provided those of us in this gathering today with unsurpassed educational opportunities.

We have inherited these marvelous institutions because of the commitments and the sacrifices of previous generations...and it is our obligation as responsible stewards--not to mention as responsible parents--to sustain them to serve our own children and grandchildren.

It seems clear that if we are to honor this responsibility to future generations, we must re-establish the priority of both our personal and our public investments in education, in the future of our children ...and hence in the future of our state and our nation.
